OPA Exacts $200,000 for Overcharges On Liquor

Kronheim, Head Of D. C. Firm, Admits Violation; No Legal Action to Be Taken

Milton S. Kronheim & Sons, Washington's largest liquor dealer, admitted yesterday charging $76,802 over the legal price ceiling in three months and paid the Office of Price Administration $200,000, nearly the required triple indemnity.

In one of the Nation's largest liquor cases, Kronheim admitted making the overcharges during March, April and May, and paid the money after the OPA subtracted $30,000 from what Kronheim was liable for. There will be no criminal prosecution.

In making the announcement John L. Laskey, Chief District OPA attorney, said a large black market in liquors still existed here, but said that while widespread investigations were still going on, there were limitations on his manpower and part of his investigative staff must be constantly used in other black market fields.

Some $10 Overcharges

Kronheim made overcharges of as much as $10 on a case of whisky, Laskey said. Kronheim sells only to retailers and to other wholesalers. Laskey said there was no "direct evidence" the overcharges were carried over to consumers. Laskey said he did not doubt, however, that in some instances this did occur.

In a prepared statement, Kronheim said:

"The claim asserted by the local OPA against Milton S. Kronheim & Son arose because of a difference in interpretation of the application of a general ceiling price order to technical matters peculiar to the alcohol beverage business.

Order Withdrawn

"That order, because of the realization of its impracticability to the beverage business, has been withdrawn by the national OPA. Upon its withdrawal, there was substituted a new ceiling price order and one which is comparatively simple and based upon an entirely different theory and practice.

"The change of method by the OPA shows that the old order could not be expected to operate fairly both to the consumer and to business. All the claims are under the discarded order.

"A thorough study of the matter convinced us that while in the end we would be probably successful in maintaining our interpretation of the old order, the cost of the necessarily long litigation involved would be unbearable by our company."

Asked later how he felt about the penalty, Kronheim replied, "It hurts like hell, brother. It hurts like hell."

The investigation of Kronheim began in August upon the complaint of one of his customers. OPA was given the company's financial records by Kronheim, who aided materially in the investigation, Laskey said.

Laskey said his office is cooperating with the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board and the District Commissioners in efforts to control illegal sales of liquors here. He

Anti-Mosley Mob Hoots Lady Astor Into a Retreat

London, Dec. 7 (AP).—Lady Astor had one of the roughest days of her long parliamentary career today.

Workers demonstrating in Commons lobby this morning against the release of Sir Oswald Mosley, prewar Fascist leader in Britain, hooted her into retreat with angry shouts when she said they were shirking the war effort.

Later, when the Virginia-born viscountess began a series of interruptions during debate, Laborite member Emanuel Shinwell exhorted:

"Throw her out. Something ought to be done about her, you know."

Several members protested against her repeated interjections. Sir George Davis complained "we've had to put up with it for 20 years."

Again, when Lady Astor applauded a point, saying "Hear, hear," a Laborite member glared at her and cracked, "Some of us would like to try." The House cheered.

Quake Kills 550, Levels 12 Villages in Turkey

New York, Dec. 7 (INS).—The British radio reported that 550 persons had been killed and 12 villages in northeast Anatolia destroyed in a new earthquake in Turkey.

Four thousand persons were killed in an earthquake that struck Turkey on November 25.

Police Watch Redskins After Gaming Rumors

George P. Marshall, president of the Redskins, has asked Washington police to investigate rumors that some of his Redskin players have been associating with gamblers and may have been betting on football games, it was revealed yesterday.

Marshall made the disclosure following a report that National Football League Commissioner Elmer Layden was investigating rumors of betting by players in the professional league.

Layden last night denied that he was making a special inquiry into football betting in Washington and declared he had not been informed of any betting situation here.

It was revealed by Marshall, however, that he went to the office of Superintendent of Police Maj. Edward Kelly following the Redskins' 14-14 tie with the Philadelphia-Pittsburgh team on November 7 and asked his aid in running down disturbing reports about his players.

"I asked Major Kelly if he would watch out for any sign of my players habituating places where liquor is served and associating with the wrong type of persons," said Marshall. "My players are forbidden by club policy from visiting liquor establishments."

Marshall expressed utmost confidence in the morality of Redskin players, adding:

"Anyone who says any Redskin player has been betting on professional football games is a liar. I am willing to pay $5000 in cash for proof. That's how much confidence

Local's Funds Involved

Larry Kelly Sued for $20,000 By Laborers' Union Official

Larry Kelly, labor leader and fugitive from a grand jury, was sued yesterday for the return of $20,000 he allegedly misappropriated from the Building Laborers Local 74 here. The suit was filed by Herbert Rivers, international first vice president of the union, in behalf of the local organization.

The suit, begun in Upper Marlboro, Md., also names as defendants Kelly's wife, Dorothy Bond Kelly, and three others, and charges Kelly "misappropriated said monies for his own personal use and benefit in and about the purchase of" four lots and his house in Berwyn, Md.

The suit was authorized by Kelly's once staunch allies, the officers of the international union.

Kelly once was president of the local and until last week was treasurer of its most lucrative pie, the building fund, which an Assistant United States Attorney, his own union, and now the international officers, all agree he used for his own purposes.

Mrs. Kelly is scheduled to appear today before the District Grand Jury. For weeks the United States Marshal sought to serve her with a subpoena. She was found at home yesterday. She was once Kelly's secretary, and soon after he employed her, Kelly's first wife divorced him.

Here are the other investigations now going on of the union of 450,000 members of which Joseph V. (Joe da Maroosh) Moreschi is international president:

1. The Justice Department, according to Assistant Attorney General Tom C. Clark, has a probe pending of conditions at Orangeburg (N. Y.) Army Base, where it is alleged vice and gambling was rife among the workers.

8000 Influenza Cases Called Normal Seasonal Increase

Washington hospitals yesterday were turning away flu cases as the District Health Department reported about 8000 occurrences of the illness and joined with U. S. Public Health Service spokesmen in designating the situation here as a "normal seasonal increase." Nearby Virginia and Maryland reports last night said those areas were affected.

The Public Health Service spokesman said the number of cases 2 years ago was 5 times greater than for the period corresponding to the past 10 days, "yet no serious epidemic occurred." The spokesman said "there is no evidence that we are coming into anything like we had in 1918" when 20 million died in the world-wide epidemic.

Dr. James G. Cumming, director of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases, said that in this outbreak there appears to be no evidence of fatal pneumonia complications which accompanied the 1918 epidemic, and that the present situation does not appear alarming.

However, although Dr. Cumming reports only a slight seasonal increase in pneumonia deaths, cases are prevalent at the hospitals, it was found.

Meanwhile, the Police Department Band had to cancel plans to play for the All-Star game Saturday when 22 of its 52 members did not report for practice yesterday due to respiratory illnesses. Leader Lieut. Charles Benter said at least four others who were present were sick.

The Health Department reminded physicians and hospital superintendents that influenza is a reportable disease and stressed importance of cooperation in giving the department daily reports, thus making public control more effective.

In Montgomery County, County Health Officer V. L. Ellicott said conversations with local doctors had convinced him the disease had not hit the Maryland suburb so badly as it had the District and nearby Virginia. Doctors are not required to report the disease in Montgomery County, it was said, so no accurate check of prevalence

Gonzaga High School Closed Because of Flu

Officials of Gonzaga High School, 27 I st. nw., last night announced that the school has been closed for the rest of the week due to the large number of absences of students stricken with the flu. Bellhop Finds $2800, Is Offered Ten-Cent Tip

Exchange rates on $2800 dropped to 10 cents yesterday at a downtown hotel.

City-Wide Campaign

10,000 Boy Scouts and Cubs To Get Behind Paper Drive

District area Boy Scout commissioners yesterday mapped a city-wide waste paper solicitation program in which Washington's 10,000 Scouts and clubs will be called upon to participate for the duration.

A bulletin detailing instructions and purposes of the program, which is sponsored by The Washington Post and the District of Columbia Salvage Committee to bring in paper unreclaimed in existing drives, will be mailed within a few days to leaders of Washington Scout troops. Troops in the Metropolitan area, including Alexandria, Arlington and nearby Maryland, will be invited to join the all-out drive.

Meanwhile, District Scouts are being asked to set up collection depots for waste paper, which D. C. Salvage Committee trucks will pick up for conversion to essential war needs. The proposed campaign, designed to solicit the 40 per cent of Washington's paper salvage which is estimated uncollected, will utilize personal contact of sources of supply for the first time.

According to the plan organized yesterday, troop masters will assign individual scouts to specific sections in their area for solicitation, while others will be responsible for assorting and piling bundles at the designated collection depots. Scouts will keep records of collection times for various concerns and families enlisted in the drive. It was pointed out that definite collection dates, once or twice weekly, are preferable.

Receipts from paper sales will be turned over to the troops for financing regular scouting projects. Additional incentives will be offered on the basis of troop accomplishment, also to dovetail into the scout program.

Participating in the conference yesterday were Linn C. Drake, chief scout executive of the Metropolitan district; John R. Long, head of the central area, who planned a similar paper drive in New York recently; Fred G. Orsinger, head of the northern area; C. E. Bingham, head of the western area, and Horace Walker, secretary of the District Salvage Committee.

War's Gains Threatened, Byrnes Says

Inflation Breeds Home Front Crisis, He Warns Public; Pleads to Hold Line

By Ben W. Gilbert

War Mobilizer James F. Byrnes told the American people last night that the threat of inflation has created "a crisis on the home front which may deprive us of the very things for which we are fighting—a stable, peaceful, prosperous world."

In a bluntly phrased radio address marking the second anniversary of Pearl Harbor Day, Byrnes stated:

"The prospect of a stable, peaceful, prosperous America is far from bright simply because the American people apparently do not realize the supreme importance of holding the line against inflation."

Urges Food Subsidies

Byrnes turned the spotlight on congressional threats to the "line" and urged continuation of food subsidies, adoption of a greater program of taxes and savings, and defeat of measures to increase the price of milk and oil and to boost railroad wages.

"It is truly impossible for any Administration to attempt to administer equal justice under law if special groups, be they oil or coal producers, or coal miners or railroad employes, can get special treatment," Byrnes asserted.

Referring pointedly to the railroad workers who have threatened to precipitate a nationwide transportation strike to secure their wage demands, Byrnes said, "No group has a right to hold a political pistol at the head of Congress or of any administrative agency and say that they will strike."

"The Government must say to any such group, 'Lay that pistol down'," Byrnes added.

The War Mobilizer touched on other sectors of the "home front" as follows:

1. The 150,000th airplane built since the start of the defense program in June, 1940, came off the assembly line yesterday.

2. War expenditures are running at a rate in excess of 90 billion dollars a year, with more than 50 per cent of our national income devoted to war purposes.

3. The "staggering amount" of 16 billion dollars has been cut from war production programs as a result of "continuing reviews," but much of the savings "will be offset by the enlargement of other war programs which are essential to victory and which we were not before in a position to undertake."

4. A contract termination board, "composed of representatives of the various operating agencies" has been established. Byrnes did not reveal the names of the agencies participating, but it was learned that all major procurement agencies are represented. The War Production Board which has been working on the problem for many months was not included.

The entire address was designed as an admonition to the American people:

"Because we now know that we can win this war, too many of us are acting as if the war is already won. It is not. The most critical

5th Army Drives Deep Wedge Into Nazi Winter Defense Web; Reds Fall Back in Kiev Bulge

Nazis Slash Back With 1700 Tanks In Great Ukraine Counteraction

London (Wednesday), Dec. 8 (AP).—One Red army spearhead has reached to within 4 miles of Znamenka, rail junction in the Dnieper bend, a Moscow dispatch said today, as three columns drove on the city from separate directions—but in the north Russian defenders fell back from "a number of populated places" in the Kiev bulge before a German counter-attack using as many as 1700 tanks.

The fall of Znamenka, which would be a painful wound to German communications in the area, was believed imminent as Gen. Rodion Y. Malinovsky's third Ukrainian army pounded into its third day of the offensive.

1600 of Foe Slain

More than 1600 Germans were killed in this area alone, said the Moscow communique, while "a considerable number" of prisoners and three railroad trains complete with supplies fell to the Russians in the capture of 16 German strongholds. One was the railway station of Pantayevka, 10 miles southeast of Znamenka, a 12-mile advance from Alexandriya, whose capture Monday was acclaimed in a special order of the day from Premier Marshal Joseph Stalin.

The fall of Pantayevka cut two of the railroads from Znamenka, leaving only the routes south to Nikolaev and southwest to Kirovgrad in German hands.

In the north, the German counter defensive took on new strength and exploded against the Russians defending Chernyakhov on the railway between Zhitomir and Korosten—both rail junctions previously won back by the Germans.

Fighting here was extremely violent as the Germans built up successive attacks which cost them at least 1500 dead but won new territory, fifty-three German tanks were wrecked, the communique said, and despite poor weather the Russian air force raided German rear communications.

German General Killed

In other sectors of this battle the Russians successfully beat back the German attacks, the bulletin said.

German Maj. Gen. Friedrich Sieberg, a tank division commander, has been killed in Russia, the Berlin radio announced.

The activity in the Dnieper bend showed again Russian strategy of

McCarran Doubts D. C. Ever Lost Its Suffrage Rights

Hearings on District suffrage opened on Capitol Hill yesterday with Chairman McCarran of the Senate District Committee asserting that "home rule would be an improvement over the type of administration the District now has."

McCarran also stated he doubted if District residents ever lost their right to vote in national elections, and said: "The District was carved from two States—its people were not. Did this mean they lost their suffrage?"

'An End of Patience'

Southern Democrats Threaten Revolt in Soldier Vote Row

By Robert C. Albright

A warning that Southern Democrats "can form a Southern Democratic Party and vote as we please in the electoral college" rang out in the Senate yesterday as a bitter sequel to last week's States' rights revolt on Federal soldier vote legislation.

Senator Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat) of North Carolina voiced the warning. He joined Senator Harry Flood Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia in a blistering attack on Senator Joseph F. Guffey (Democrat) of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Senate Democratic Campaign Committee.

The Senate war started Saturday when Senator Guffey in a statement charged "an unholy alliance" between Northern epublicans, under the leadership of "Joe Pew," and Southern Democrats, under Senator Byrd, "to deprive the armed forces of America the right to vote."

Byrd took the floor yesterday to demand Guffey's resignation as chairman of the Senate Democratic Campaign Committee. He said there was not "one iota of truth in a single part of the statement made by Guffey as relating to me or my vote." He termed Guffey's statement "a gratuitous insult" to 24 Democratic and 18 Republican Senators who voted for the Eastland-McClellan-McKellar State-controlled soldier voting substitute.

Then Bailey made one of his rare Senate speeches. Waving an admonitory finger, he told the Senate:

"There can be an end of insults, there can be an end of toleration, there can be an end of patience."

"By the eternal gods," said Bailey, "there are men in the South, and women, too, who will not permit men in control of our party to betray us in the house of our fathers. We will assert ourselves and we are capable of asserting ourselves, and we will vindicate ourselves.

"If we cannot have a party in which we are respected, if we must be in a party in which we are scorned as Southern Democrats, we will find a party which honors us . . . because we believe in our country and believe in the Constitution from which it draws its life."

Byrd told the Senate he was informed Guffey's statement will be sent through various Government agencies to servicemen, and termed the "official dissemination of this misleading charge against United State Senators . . . a contemptible and indefensible act." Byrd said he did "not even know Joe Pew and never had any communication with him."

He said Guffey in his judgment is not the choice of Senate Democrats for senatorial campaign chairman, as he was not elected but was appointed (by the Senate)

Big Wisconsin Launched

90 Million Dollar Superbattleship Pointed at Tokyo

Philadelphia, Dec. 7 (AP).—The Navy floated its newest superbattleship, the 45,000-ton Wisconsin, on this second anniversary of Pearl Harbor—and pointed it straight at Tokyo.

Signal flags rippling gaily against a blue sky, the sleek, high-snouted dreadnaught, under construction more than 33 months at a cost of 90 million dollars, was launched "as an answer to the surprise attack which came to us two years ago today," in the words of Assistant Secretary of Navy Ralph A. Bard.

More than 30,000 Philadelphia Navy Yard workers cheered and the band struck up "On, Wisconsin," as the mighty ship, probably the most powerful battle unit now afloat, slid majestically into the sun-spangled Delaware River.

"She will be an instrument of retaliation," Bard declared, speaking on a great bunting-decked platform that the Wisconsin's immensity dwarfed. "She is dedicated to war—a war to the finish—a war that will end only with terms of unconditional surrender . . . I hope she is destined to sail some day into the harbors of Germany and Japan."

Urgent Call Hints At Imminence of Landing Operations

The War Production Board yesterday issued an urgent call for a record-breaking production of steel plates and sheets during the next two months for the construction of "troop carriers, landing craft of all kinds, and other equipment being produced for further attacks on German and Japanese areas."

Tied in with the earlier disclosure that an over-riding priority had been granted to landing equipment, the development appeared to point to the imminence of gigantic new "amphibious operations."

J. T. Whiting, director of WPB's steel division, dispatched the following telegram to presidents of steel companies listed as principal producers of plates and sheets:

"Increased output of plates and sheets is essential to meet the demands of the war program. We are expecting a new record of plate shipments from your company and the entire industry in December and again in January. Please notify your organization accordingly."

WPB said a similar telegram was sent to Philip Murray, who is

Pearl Harbor Trials Delayed For 6 Months

Congress Reduces Time Limit After Protest by Clark

By the Associated Press

Congress passed a resolution yesterday permitting a further delay of six months in the courts-martial of the men commanding at Pearl Harbor when the Japanese struck exactly two years ago.

The resolution extended the two-year statute of limitations by a half-year. Officials had said information of value to the enemy might be divulged if Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel and Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short were brought to trial now for alleged neglect of duty.

During yesterday's debate Senator Clark (Democrat) of Missouri urged the impeachment of Secretary of War Stimson and Navy Secretary Knox unless they ordered immediate courts-martial.

The Senate made one concession to Clark. It struck out the House proviso extending the statute of limitations to one year after the Japanese war ends, and made it, instead, six months from yesterday. The House quickly approved the revised version, sending it to the White House.

Although the President may not sign it for several days or longer, the resolution contains a provision making the extension retroactive to yesterday.

Clark, a regimental officer in the army of World War I, said in the Senate that Stimson and Knox were guilty of "a disgraceful dereliction of duty" in postponing courts-martial of Admiral Kimmel and Gen-

Parley Shows Turkey, Allies In Full Accord

'Big 2' Confer With Inonu; Cairo Hums With Invasion Talk

Cairo, Dec. 7 (AP).—President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill announced tonight the conclusion of a three-day conference here with President Ismet Inonu of Turkey in which they studied the general political situation, "examined at length the policy to be followed" and found their nations bound by "the closest unity."

The "firm friendship" between strategic Turkey and the Soviet Union, which was represented at most of the sessions, also was attested to in a joint communique on the parley, a significant sequel to the Cairo and Teheran conferences in which Roosevelt and Churchill mapped the war around the world with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and Premier Stalin.

(A dispatch from Ankara said "there seems little doubt the conference is in preparation for Turkish entry into the war, although military action may still be delayed for a couple of months.")

Balkans Drive Foreseen

Immediate reaction in Cairo tonight was that a full-scale Allied Balkans campaign now is planned with assurances that Turkey would cooperate directly or in some degree facilitate a drive against this back door to Hitler's Europe.

The conference was held December 4, 5 and 6, with Foreign Secretaries Anthony Eden and Numan Menemencioglu sitting in with the

Tested for Year

Sodium Fluoride Tooth Paint Declared to Retard Decay

By the Associated Press

A new advance in the quest for a preventive for tooth decay was reported yesterday.

Dental Sergt. John W. Knutson of the United States Public Health Service and Prof. Wallace D. Armstrong of the University of Minnesota declared that the painting of teeth of a group of Minnesota school children with a solution of sodium fluoride—the sodium salt of the gas fluorine—had lowered the incidence of new decay by approximately 40 per cent.

Their findings were reported in "Public Health Reports," a publication of the United States Public Health Service.

Two hundred and eighty-nine youngsters between the ages of 7 and 15 received applications of the solution on the upper and lower teeth of the left side of their mouth. The right side was left untreated.

In addition, 337 other children, participating in the tests as "controls," received no application of the solution on either side. The latter group was used to measure the normal incidence of decaying teeth, so as to offer valid comparison with decay which might occur in the untreated teeth of the first group.

Both groups had their teeth thoroughly cleaned before the tests began.

At the end of a year, the children were reexamined, and these were the findings:

1. In the treated group there were 39.8 per cent less new decayed teeth in the treated sections of the mouth than in the untreated section.

2. The rate of new decay in the untreated teeth of the treated group was approximately the same as that in the children who had received treatments on neither side. The doctors said this finding indicated the solution was effective only on teeth to which it was applied, and did not spread its protection to other teeth in the mouth.

3. While the solution was effective in preventing new decay, it had no significant effect in preventing further decay in teeth

Allies Now Hold Dominating Ground In Area Commanding Main Road to Rome

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Dec. 7 (AP).—Stabbing their way onto heights 6 miles southwest of Mignano overlooking the flooded Garigliano River, Allied Fifth Army troops have driven a deep wedge into the intricate web of fortifications of the German winter line and now hold dominating positions in a 25-square-mile area commanding the road to Rome.

American troops, who in a few months have become masters of mountain fighting, were throwing back repeated frantic Nazi counter-attacks and slugging their way steadily forward against a strongly entrenched enemy through rain, mud, flooded creeks, minefields and barbed-wire entanglements.

Describing the bitter fighting in the vital Monte Maggiore and Monte Camino area, a headquarters spokesman declared: "We now hold the most important features in that area, roughly 5 miles long and 5 miles wide."

Units of Eighth Cross Moro

In an equally impressive showing against the reinforced and desperately resisting Nazis, the Eighth Army's Infantry and Armor suddenly crashed across the Moro River near the Adriatic Sea before the enemy could establish new fortifications on the northern bank. Four German tanks were destroyed.

How far General Montgomery's advance guards penetrated beyond the Moro was not disclosed, but the thrust along comparatively level ground on Italy's eastern coast put the Eighth Army within 13 or 14 miles of the Port of Pescara, terminus of a major highway to Rome.

Massed German infantry, tanks and artillery stubbornly held up Montgomery's advance around the inland strong point of Orsogna, which the Nazis recaptured two days ago in an extremely costly counterattack, and around Guardiagriele, 3½ miles southwest of Orsogna.

The German command appeared willing to pay an increasingly high price to delay the Eighth Army's advance and thus save—if only for a short time—the important town of Chieti, capital of Abruzzo Province, which is 10 airline miles from Orsogna. The fighting on the Adriatic flank now runs from the north bank of the Moro to a point 4 miles northeast of Orsogna, and then south to Casoli.

Evaluation of Gains Difficult

Full evaluation of the newest gains by General Clark's Fifth Army on the south side of the main Rome highway between Mignano and Cassino was difficult, partly because of the Allied command's reticence about a companion American drive in the area north of Mignano.

Clark's headquarters announced a 1-mile thrust was made west of Filignano, which is 4 miles north of Venafro, but omitted to mention how far previous gains in that sector had progressed or whether the new onslaught there portended a

Allied Bombers Raid New Britain In Heavy Attack

Southwest Pacific Allied Headquarters (Wednesday), Dec. 8 (AP).—New Britain was heavily bombed by Allied planes which dropped 150 tons in the Cape Gloucester area, General MacArthur reported today. This brought to 738 tons the bomb load dropped here in eight days.

A spokesman said a sharp drop in Japanese naval craft using the big base of Rabaul on New Britain was noticed. Rabaul, which once dominated the southern seas, no longer is tenable to the enemy and "we have complete control of the waters."

Ground fighting has subsided in the Empress Augusta Bay area on Bougainville, where the Americans have enlarged their beachhead to 7 miles wide and 5 miles deep.

Sharp fighting was in progress in the Australians' tank-supported drive on Wareo, New Guinea.

War Sidelights

Pro-Nazi Parisians Get Arms

Madrid, Dec. 7 (AP).—German authorities in Paris have given oral approval for five pro-Nazi organizations there to arm their members, it was learned today.

The heavily censored Paris press has been carrying references in the past week to the fact that "collaborationists replied with fire to terrorists when attacked."

Border reports say that armed bands of collaborationists, notably Marchel Ducard's Francists, and members of the so-called Aryan League, have been conducting an increasing number of "terror raids" against Jews in Paris.

Recent arrivals have reported quarrels on Paris boulevards involving elaborately uniformed Francists, German soldiers and French Jews.

Pope Asks Prayers

Bern, Dec. 7 (AP).—Pope Pius XII has asked all Catholics to hold public prayers for peace tomorrow on the occasion of the Feast of the Immaculate Conception, the Swiss Telegraphic Agency reported today. The Pontiff sent his "urgent exhortation" to the faithful throughout the world to "scrupulously observe the law of God," the dispatch said.

Norwegians Departed

Stockholm, Dec. 7 (AP).—An Oslo dispatch censored by the Germans said today that 1200 Norwegian students and 20 professors at the University of Oslo, who were arrested a week ago, probably would be deported to Germany Thursday. The students are accused of illegal activities.

Peace Move Reported

London, Dec. 7 (INS).—Advices from Switzerland said to day that a group of deposed German generals and leading industrialists have tried to sound out the Allies on the conditions they would require for an armistice.

Informed European sources warned, however, that the reported move may merely be designated to confuse the Allies or cause a letdown in the Allied war effort.

The dispatch reported the German officers were working in close collaboration with the industrialists.

Unity With Allies Seen in London as Prelude to Drive

London, Dec. 7 (AP).—Turkey's new alignment in "closest unity" with the Big Three was seen here tonight as a prelude to a Balkan smash calculated to precipitate the collapse of Adolf Hitler's already tottering satellites, Bulgaria and Rumania.

The effect of the news on Bulgaria and Rumania is expected to be explosive. Repercussion in Hungary also is likely to shake the nerves of that war-weary land.

A long tradition of friendship with Russia has kept Bulgaria out of hostilities against the Soviet Union despite her satellite status with Germany. It is a question whether German troops garrisoned in Bulgaria could compel resistance against any Balkan invasion in which Russia participated.

Rumania, viewing the approach of the Red army to her northeastern border, must see in the accord a fateful warning that her only hope is to break loose from Hitler before the blow falls.

The impact of the Turkish accord on the Arab world also was seen as important. If Arabs throughout the Near East are convinced the Big Three powers are collaborating harmoniously with Turkey, their confidence in the future under Allied leadership will be strengthened.

Semi-official Russian utterances for some months have stressed that it was high time the Turks took a more active role in the Allied cause.

It was not disclosed whether the Greek and Yugoslav governments in exile in Cairo were consulted on Balkan plans, but it is believed likely they were.

Reuters reported the Ankara radio, broadcasting a Turkish view of the significance of the Cairo meeting, said "large-scale operations and a decisive battle are very close at hand. The communique can be summed up in these words: It is complete agreement on the problems of war and peace."

The German foreign office professed to view the new parley calmly, explaining that a Balkan offensive was discussed at Teheran, and that the Allies naturally were anxious to know what Turkey's attitude toward such a development would be. Swedish correspondents in Berlin, however, reported the Nazi capital convinced that the Allies were exerting heavy pressure to "force Turkey to join the war."

Berlin broadcast today that Inonu was on his way home, and that "immediately" after his return to Ankara "the Turkish cabinet will hold a special session."

Ankara dispatches said that the German Ambassador to Turkey, Franz von Papen, had had a talk lasting nearly an hour with Turkish Premier Sukru Saracoglu yesterday, further indicating the Germans were leaving no stone unturned to do what they could to stop the tide of Allied diplomatic successes.

BIGGEST BATTLESHIP—The super-battleship Wisconsin of the Navy's "biggest battleship" class built in two years at a cost of 90 million dollars moves down the ways at the Philadelphia Navy Yard yesterday to touch water for the first time. Thirty-five thousand watched the launching on the second anniversary of the Pearl Harbor attack and Assistant Secretary of the Navy Ralph A. Bard hailed the giant vessel as an answer to Japanese aggression. The ship, her prow towering higher than a five-story building, was sponsored by Mrs. Walter S. Goodland, wife of the Governor of Wisconsin maintaining the initiative along the 600-mile front by successive jabs at widely separated areas. As the White Russian front apparently subsided in inactivity, the south Ukranian armies took the offensive hundreds of miles away, presenting the Germans with the problem of moving reserves again.

Into this category fell the Kiev bulge, established in the first flush of victory at Kiev as Soviet troops swept swiftly westward to captured Zhitomir and Korosten. The Germans replied with an immediate counterattack of considerable strength, concentrating heavy teams of men and materials on narrow fronts to win breakthroughs by sheer weight. The Russians retreated successively from Zhitomir and Korosten but still held Chernyakhov and Turchinka on the railroad between the two junctions as well as Ovruch to the north.

The fighting today was in the Chernyakhov area where the Russians said "our troops continued to wage fierce engagements against large forces of enemy infantry and tanks and under their pressure evacuated several populated places."

Two Units Face Isolation

The Dnieper bend successes of the Reds threatened to isolate two large units of the German Ukrainian army, Moscow dispatches said in reporting the battle for Znamenka nearing a decision.

The Russians had achieved a major breakthrough yesterday, periling the Germans remaining in the Dnieper bend and casting a shadow on the entire Nazi army as far southwestward as Odessa. The Russians in this area were less than 140 miles across the flat steppe from the Odessa-Lwow Railway, key to all German communications in the Ukraine. Farther north, at Cherkassy, they were only 120 miles away.

Kurusu Declares U. S. and Britain Underrated Japs

London, Dec. 7 (AP).—Saburo Kurusu, special Japanese envoy who was in Washington conducting "peace negotiations" two years ago today when Pearl Harbor was attacked, had this to say of the war today in a Tokyo interview broadcast by the Berlin radio:

"It is a fallacy to believe that recent defeats have increased war weariness of certain classes in the United States to such an extent as to lead them to lay down arms.

"As long as President Roosevelt is holding the reins of government, the end of the war is not in sight.

"The war against Japan seems to have been considered a kind of an experiment in the United States. They didn't seem to have realized the war against China, far from exhausting Japan, actually increased her war production. Both Anglo-Saxon powers underrated Japan."

135 Take Oath As U. S. Citizens in District Ceremony

A Swedish baroness and a one-time Olympic wrestling champion were among 135 persons naturalized on the second anniversary of Pearl Harbor yesterday in District Court. This was the largest number of persons to be naturalized here in one day.

This year, 1850 persons have obtained citizenship here, as compared to 634 during all of 1942.

The baroness is now Mrs. Ulla Luderowski, 27, of Alexandria. Her husband is Theodore Luderowski, a chief petty officer in the Navy. Mrs. Luderowski came to this country in 1940 to study art in Michigan, and specializes in weaving and textile designs. She married in 1941 and has a 1-year-old son.

Joseph Morell, 34, a native of Hungary, won the middleweight wrestling championship in the 1936 Olympic games. He has been in this country six years and resides at 1725 New Hampshire ave. nw.

70% of Bremen Badly Damaged, Stockholm Hears

Stockholm, Dec. 7 (AP).—Allied aerial bombardments have badly damaged 70 per cent of Bremen, and its harbor districts cannot be restored to normal for three years, a returned traveler said today.

For days after the last American daylight raid November 29, he said, no ships could sail up the Weser River into Bremen, all being halted 40 miles away at Bremerhaven. An official told him between 6000 and 7000 persons had been killed in the raids and 20,000 wounded.

"Despite the raids," he said, "American and British airmen are not unpopular. People wonder why they did not come sooner."

Gasoline Ration Coupons to Bear Numbers March 1

Supplementary B and C gasoline ration coupons will be numbered serially like theater tickets beginning about March 1, the Office of Price Administration said yesterday.

The price agency announced last week that T tickets for commercial vehicles will be serially numbered after January 1. The E and R coupons issued for non-highway gasoline also will be numbered in strips about March 1, the OPA said.

The serial numbering is designed to simplify rationing enforcement and prevent diversion of gasoline.

Jury Hears Soucek In Brewster Probe

Witness Had Told Of $48,000 'Kitty' at House Investigation

By Mary Spargo

Zeus Soucek, former Navy flier, now vice president of Brewster Aeronautical Corp., testified yesterday before the District grand jury in connection with a Justice Department inquiry into a $48,000 lobbying fund raised in 1940 by Brewster and other aircraft companies to secure an amendement to the tax laws.

Soucek was a witness some weeks ago before the House Naval Affairs Subcommittee whose two months' probe into the production failures of the Brewster company led to public disclosure of the fund and Justice action.

Described Journey

At that time Soucek told the subcommittee that Ferdinand Tannebaum, a member of Brewster's Board of Directors, and also of its legal counsel, the firm of Olvaney, Eisner and Donnelly of New York, had discovered after the House passed the 1940 Revenue Act that it would work a hardship on Brewster and other aircraft companies receiving advance payments on contracts.

Soucek told the committee that on the advice of Tannebaum and James Work, founder and then president of Brewster, he flew to Washington to see William D. Jamieson, Washington attorney, former Democratic representative from Iowa.

Brewster, Soucek said, wanted an amendment which would materially cut down the excess profits tax they would have had to pay under the House-passed bill.

Talked With Jamieson

After consultation with Jamieson, for the New York firm headed by Judge George W. Olvaney, former Tammany Hall leader, Soucek said Brewster officials called the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce to see if other companies would like to contribute to a "kitty" to obtain an amendment to the law if possible.

Originally four companies, including Brewster, were considered to be participating, but the fund eventually simmered down to $48,000, raised by three concerns.

All the money was paid over to Jamieson, Soucek told the subcommittee. A Securities and Exchange report made at the request of President Roosevelt and read into the committee record showed that $30,000 of the fund was paid by Jamieson to Frank J. Comfort, Democratic National Committeeeman from Iowa, who flew here at Jamieson's request.

Jamieson has told The Post that after he had tried to have the amendment introduced in the Senate and failed he sent for Comfort, ate and failed he sent for Comfort, who is an attorney.

Within a day or two the desired amendment was introduced by Clyde Herring, then Democratic Senator from Iowa, a member of the Senate Finance Committee.

$20,000 Was Located

According to the SEC report, part of which was read into the hearing by Representative Grant (Republican) of Indiana who followed it up with a strong demand for a Justice investigation, Comfort at first could not remember what happened to approximately $20,000 of the $30,000 he received. Later he recalled that he had put it in a safe deposit box across from his office.

Two SEC accountants went out to Iowa in August 1942 to see the newly located fund.

Both Lloyd Mathers and Frank Corcoran were witnesses yesterday before the grand jury. A Treasury representative and another Government agent also testified. According to a supplementary SEC report, issued after the President sent the first SEC document to the Justice Department with a request for investigation, there was a question concerning the serial number of the bills.

Earlier in the grand jury hearings, which had gone into their second week, Tannebaum, Comfort, Herring and Miss Melinda Alexander, former clerk of a Senate subcommittee of which Herring was chairman, have given their testimony.

Gen. Reckord Gets Post In Europe

London, Dec. 7 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord of Baltimore, Md., former head of the Third Service Command, has been appointed provost marshal general for the European theater of operations.

Reckord, who commanded the 115th Infantry in France in World War I, succeeds Brig. Gen. Gordon C. Hollar, Sioux City, Iowa, who will serve under Reckord as deputy director.

Born in Harford County, Md., Reckord enlisted in the National Guard in 1901, was a captain three years later and a major in 1908. In 1920 he was made a brigadier general and in 1934 was promoted to major general commanding the Twenty-ninth Division.

The new provost marshal general served as adjutant general of Maryland for 21 years, from the spring of 1920 to the spring of 1941.

Reckord was awarded the Distinguished Service medal for skill and aggressiveness and devotion to duty while directing operations against the Germans north of Verdun in the first World War.

Recently, Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor of Maryland directed that a permanent record be compiled dealing exclusively with Reckord's part in Maryland military and civilian defense activities during the past three years. At the time the Governor said: "Not until the full story of this war is written in all its phases will the people fully realize how much General Reckord has meant toward the success of the entire program."

Mrs. Browder Loses Appeal To Stay in U. S.

By the Associated Press

Mrs. Raissa Irene Browder, wife of the general secretary of the Communist Party in this country, yesterday lost another plea for suspension of a deportation order against her.

In denying her second plea, the Board of Immigration Appeals said no evidence had been presented to dispel the "doubts and evasions" raised in the board's 1940 decision holding her to be deportable.

"The respondent has persisted in her failure to remove these doubts and evasions," the board commented. "For this reason, we must again deny her application."

The deportation warrant has not been carried out because of difficulties in arranging for Mrs. Browder's return to her native land, Russia, and because of the hazards of present-day oceanic transportation, the board said.

Her husband, Earl Browder, a native-born American, was three times the Communist nominee for President.

She and Browder were married in Moscow in 1926, and they have three children. In the deportation proceeding Mrs. Browder testified that she assisted her husband by doing research for his writings and speeches but that she was not a member of any political party in this country and that she never gave any thought to subscribing to the tenets of the Communist Party.

The board observed at that time that the testimony, coming from the wife of the leading representative of the Communist Party in this country, was "hardly credible."

Browder served 14 months in the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta, following his conviction in 1940 of charges of falsification of obtaining a passport. President Roosevelt commuted his four-year sentence last year with the assertion it would "promote national unity."

Bill Abolishing Feed Subsidy, Raising Price of Milk, Reported

By Christine Sadler

The Senate Agriculture Committee unanimously reported yesterday a bill to abolish the dairy-feed subsidy and make mandatory an upward adjustment of milk prices to reflect present production costs.

Until the prices could be worked out on a regional basis, the increase would be 1 cent a quart throughout the Nation, the measure provided.

This bill will go to the Senate next week and be debated with the measure now pending before the Banking Committee to outlaw most food subsidies after December 31, it was declared by Senator Aiken (Republican) of Vermont, the inference being that if the banking group made a compromise permitting the milk subsidy to remain in any form the other bill would be pushed.

Speaks for Farmers

Meantime, the banking committee heard Ezra T. Benson, executive secretary of the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives, declare farmers favor inflation control and want only price increases necessary to cover production costs.

Price ceilings should be flexible enough to cover production variations, he claimed, and not be expected to provide a chief means of fighting inflation. The fundamental basis of an anti-inflation program, he declared, must be a sound taxation and savings plan.

Asserting that wages and farm prices are out of line, Benson said it seemed only logical that wages should be rolled back and subsidized before food prices were. While not advocating a wage subsidy, he argued it would be more sensible and make for just as great savings to the consumer at less cost than the food subsidies.

"At no time have farmers asked for a discontinuance of price control," Benson declared . . . "All they want is a flexible control which will not be so rigid as to be eternally breaking up under one new pressure after another."

Says OPA Has Power

He said OPA already had the authority to adjust ceiling prices to meet farm demands, but has refused to exercise the authority.

"If the principle of food subsidies is continued, within a decade the secure basis of farm ownership will have disappeared," he declared.

Leon Bosch, assistant chief of the meat rationing branch of the OPA, was called by committee members aroused by assertions from Joseph G. Montague, attorney for the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Growers Association, that 50,000 pounds of meat were "spoiling" in a Washington warehouse as "only one result of glutted wholesale markets."

Bosch denied this, and said an inspection made early yesterday showed the meat "still is in a salable condition, and fit for human consumption."

Montague said the country faces "the most horrible beef famine in history" as a result of market control, which he said forced livestock producers to sell their cattle this fall instead of feeding them to a normal size.

which once had been diseased.

4. The relative reduction in the incidence of decay in the treated teeth was apparently greater in the upper than in the lower teeth. The doctors offered no explanation for this.

Declaring that further studies were indicated, the doctors said the evidence applied only to the effect produced during the first year following the applications and that "the duration of the effect is not yet known.

Washington Again Exceeds War Bond Goal

November War Bond sales in Washington totaled $12,069,758 or 124.5 per cent of the $9,700,000 quota set for the month by the Treasury, the Fifth Federal Reserve Bank at Richmond reported Monday by John A. Reilly, chairman of the District War Finance Committee.

Washington, consequently, still holds the distinction of having surpassed its goal every month since the Treasury began establishing quotas last December.

Of the total sales, $11,048,515 was in Series E, commonly referred to as "The People's Bond." Washington also holds the record as the Nation's largest per capita purchaser of this class of bond.

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 7 (AP).—Thomas H. Robinson, jr., told Federal court jurors today he spent half of the $50,000 ransom paid for the release of Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll "right and left," except for $4,000 he gave to his mother and $500 to his father.

He testified yesterday he had left $25,000 for Mrs. Stoll, according to an alleged agreement, in the Indianapolis apartment where he held her prisoner for six days after kidnaping her in October, 1934.

His woman companion in the 15 months he was a fugitive, Jean Breeze, was identified by an FBI agent earlier as the woman who gave the tip which led to Robinson's arrest in California in 1936.

Bethesdans Reunited in Italy

Two Bethesda boys, next-door neighbors, who entered separate branches of the armed service at different times, held a reunion recently in an Italian equivalent of a tap room, according to a letter received yesterday by Howard A. Pickering, sr., 5201 Wisconsin ave. from his son Howard.

HEIDER

"Here it is, big news of the day. Page one stuff," he wrote. "Hang onto your hat! I met over here none other than Al Heider. Is that news or is it?"

"Al" is Albert Heider, 4215 Harrison st., just around the corner from the Pickering home.

"I was in town," young Pickering's letter continues, "trying my best, my level best, to get some fun out of the day. I went into a tap room and had a few of what they call beer over here. It was a noisy place and I'd about made up my mind to hunt fun somewhere else when I heard a voice I knew.

"Al wanted a beer and everybody within a mile, who understood English, knew about it, too. There he was big as life, Old Al himself. Damn, was I glad to see him! Greatest surprise of my life.

"He told me what he'd heard from home and I gave him all my news and there was plenty, for we hadn't seen each other since Al went into the Coast Guard a little while before I joined the Army.

PICKERING

"When we parted Al made me promise to have dinner with him on shipboard. 'Dinner?' I thought he'd gone high hat, but he hadn't, not a bit.

"The next day we ate at the officers' mess as guests of the Navy and, mister, was that chow! When Al does anything he does it right."

Young Pickering went across early last spring. He wa born in Baltimore and is 27 years old.

Heider joined the Coast Guard in July, 1942, and went into active service immediately. He is 30, and attended school at Western High.

Parley Shows Turkey Seeing Eye-to-Eye With the Allies principals for Britain and Turkey and Harry Hopkins, President Roosevelt's personal adviser, joining on the American side.

"Participation of the head of the Turkish state bears striking testimony to the strength of the alliance which unites Great Britain and Turkey and to the firm friendship existing between the Turkish people and the United States of America and the Soviet Union," said the communique.

"The study of all problems in a spirit of understanding and loyalty showed that the closest unity existed between the United States of America, Turkey and Great Britain in their attitude to the world situation.

Cairo was flooded with rumors, including the prediction that Turkey was ready to enter the war immediately.

The sober fact seemed to be, however, that Turkey is near sizable German fround forces and air fields and that she would need Allied help if she should abandon her neutrality.

High British quarters took cognizance of a Stockholm report that German and Bulgarian troops were massing along the Turkish border, and stated fiflatly there was no confirmation for this report.

The possibility remained that Turkey, while maintaining neutrality, might cede bases to the Allies.

The talks with Inonu were held at the site of the earlier Roosevelt-Churchill conference with Chiang Kai-shek—the heavily-guarded Mena House, surrounded by barbed wire barricades. During the sessions Roosevelt sent a spokesman to tell the correspondents:

"The President has asked me to tell you that he is most deeply impressed with the forceful character and forthrightness of the Turkish President. In President Inonu he feels he has made a new, firm friend."

It was notable that the 15-man Turkish delegation contained no military chiefs, but the chiefs of the British and American staffs sat with Roosevelt, Churchill and Inonu at two full dress meetings.

The British Middle East air and land commanders also conferred with Inonu and his aides in a separate session, December 5.

In President's Plane

President Roosevelt, it was disclosed, sent his own plane, piloted by Maj. Otis Ryan, to bring President Inonu to Cairo. The rest of the Turkish delegation also flew here, arriving in five planes.

The conference was conducted in French. At a photographing ceremony similar to those held at the Teheran parley and the previous Cairo conference, Roosevelt said to Churchill in English: Let's put the President of Turkey between us." So Roosevelt sat at the right and Churchill at the left with the Turkish President in the center.

Dines With Smuts

Cairo, Dec. 7 (AP).—President Roosevelt dined last night with Field Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts, Prime Minister of the Union of South Africa, and a member of the British war cabinet. Marshal Smuts had arrived earlier in the day by plane from London.

president of the CIO and the United Steel Workers of America.

It was clear that the WPB had received orders to strain our productive energy to meet the new schedules for landing craft—reported to have been advanced about two and one-half months ago.

Meanwhile, WPB disclosed that November production of steel plate was 1,141,140 tons—highest level for any 30-day month in history. In only March and October—31-day months—was this record exceeded, WPB said. A total of 1,014,000 tons was produced in November, 1942.

Plate production figures by months for 1943 follow: January, 1,135,413; February, 1,072,001; March, 1,167,679; April, 1,121,647; May, 1,114,920; June, 1,056,058; July, 1,089,677; August, 1,060,936; September, 1,106,851; October, 1,146,845.

Drafting of Women Not Being Considered

Neither the War Department nor the National Selective Service Headquarters are contemplating requesting legislation to draft women into the Women's Army Corps, it was learned yesterday.

Inquiries were made following a recent nation-wide Gallup Poll which indicated that both men and women were in favor of such a measure.

eral Short.

The commanders were relieved of duty soon after the Japanese attack.

Clark protesed that there still was time—yesterday—to bring formal charges against the two commanders. Referring to Stimson and Knox, he added:

"If they continue to fail to perform their duty they should be impeached."

The House resolution said both Kimmel and Short had agreed to waive the statute of limitations and would stand trial when the military heads deem it advisable. There was a question raised, however, whether either had the right to waive a legal provision.

Asserting "there is apparently a New Deal conspiracy aimed to prevent any criticism of our foreign policies," Fish (Republican) New York, called for an immediate court-martial of Kimmel and Short.

"Why is the Administration afraid to start court-martial proceedings unless higher-ups are afraid of being involved in the testimony," he asked.

In a plea for "unity of purpose," Representative Priest (Democrat) Tennessee, called for rekindling of the spirit of cooperation displayed in Congress in the period following Pearl Harbor.

He suggested that members of Congress, with the next elections a year away, "refrain from holding daily sessions of the Republican and Democratic National Conventions" on the floor of the House and Senate.

Public Views VFW Memorial Ritual

The public was allowed to view the Veterans of Foreign Wars ritualistic memorial service for the first time in Washington at Pearl Harbor memorial services conducted by Equity-Walter Reed Post. No. 284, at Roosevelt High School last night.

The services were in honor of members of the armed forces from Washington who have been killed in action or died in enemy prison camps since the attack on Pearl Harbor. Commissioner Guy Mason delivered an eulogy. Allied veterans' organizations joined in a parade of the colors.

Taylor Completes 50 Years With U. S.; No Sick Leave

Billy Taylor—W. E. Taylor is the name on the time-stained personnel card made out when he got his first job with the U. S. Weather Bureau back in December, 1893—today will celebrate 50 years of Government service, with the proud note that in all that time he took not a single day of sick leave.

For 48 of those years he has worked as chief clerk of his bureau in the Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Plant Industry, Soils and Agricultural Engineering, the first two having been spent as a messenger in the Weather Bureau which was then also a division of Agriculture.

His associates recall that Taylor "was probably the best all-around centerfielder in the history of amateur baseball in the District.

The father of six children—a daughter and five sons—Taylor lives with his wife at 5308 N. Fairfax dr., Arlington, Va. Three of his boys are in the services, one flying a Navy bomber in the Pacific, one in the Navy at Fort Bainbridge, Md., and the third with the Army Coastal Defense. And Mr. and Mrs. Taylor boast a total of four grandchildren and one great-granddaughter.

breakthrough threatening Cassino from the east.

At points American troops were advancing through flooded areas with water up to their necks, but neither the dreadful conditions nor the fury of the enemy's counter-attacks stayed their steady progress. South of the American positions on Mount Maggiore, British troops were driven off one ridge by a Nazi assault, but this was equalized by the capture of a German strong point in a nearby sector.

Both sides are having great difficulty bringing up supplies through swamplands and flooded bottoms. The Garigliano River on the western side is flooded more than a mile wide in places. Fog hangs over the mountain peaks so thickly that advancing American and British infantry have to feel their way forward.

DON AMECHE
gives you his "Pick of the Post" on the newsstands today

A BROKEN leg on Thanksgiving Day, 1928, robbed the Wisconsin bar of a likely lawyer. But gave America one of its best-loved actors. Studying law at Madison, Don Ameche pinch-hit for an injured leading man and sky rocketed to fame and recognition. Equally at home on the stage, in the movies, on the air—Don is still the local boy who does the home folks proud.
He says the new Saturday Evening Post does the country proud, too—because today's American spirit lives in its pages. He likes to sit in with the Post's dramatic articles while history's being made. He likes to see himself and the kind of people he knows in the Post's lively fiction. And Post humor, he says, deserves a special niche in laughdom. He recommends it for those wartime blues.

11-Point Postwar Job Program Adopted by Area CIO Council

By Walter Mason

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 7 (AP).—An 11-point postwar labor program was adopted today by the Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council after hearing criticism that the State administration attacked "Federal bureaucracy to hide its own shortcomings."

Sidney Katz, State CIO secretary-treasurer, declared that "we are going to ask certain human rights from the State's rights politicians of the State of Maryland," after declaring that an adequate postwar program would give State officials "less time to talk about Federal bureaucracy to hide their own shortcomings."

The CIO official first criticized Governor O'Conor for failure to appoint a CIO representative on the State postwar planning commission, then for elimination from the unemployment compensation law by the 1943 legislature of a provision for benefits to women forced to leave their jobs because of pregnancy.

"And we have a Governor," Katz shouted, "who has the temerity to denounce the Federal Government for so-called bureaucracy because it is planning to take care of such cases."

Katz asserted the State's postwar program so far includes only plans "for another toll bridge."

The program adopted by the council calls for immediate preparations for demobilization after the war, inclusion of seniority protection for members of the armed forces and Merchant Marine in all CIO labor contracts, State legislation for an educational and rehabilitation program for the armed forces and Merchant Marine, allowances for dependents of disabled veterans and seamen, and pensions for dependents of men killed during the war.

It also urged that the State postwar planning commission include CIO representation and concern itself with guaranteeing every Marylander a job, adequate sanitary and comfortable homes, sufficient medical care, educational opportunity, social-security insurance against sickness, old age or early death of wage earners, and "complete elimination of unemployment."

The council also adopted a resolution supporting the antipoll tax bill.

A resolution charging racial discrimination was adopted and asserted that "Cumberland hotels, like all hotels in the State of Maryland and the District of Columbia, pursue the unanimous practice of denying accommodations to Negroes."

A Baltimore Negro, Harold Brooks, of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America, No. 43, was chief sponsor.

Two Children Die Following Father Into Blazing House

Butler, Ga., Dec. 7 (AP).—Following their father back into a burning home, 6-year-old Bobby Bell and his 4-year-old sister, Nita, were burned to death today when fire destroyed their house.

The father, Jordan Bell, rushed back when he and Mrs. Bell discovered their infant child had not been brought out. Nita and Bobby followed. Bell emerged safely with the infant, only to find the two older children missing.

Both he and Mrs. Bell reentered the house and remained so long they were overcome. Lee Whatley dragged them to safety, but was seriously burned as he escaped through a window.

union officials, the attorney general of New York says he is widening his investigation.

2. A district attorney of New York County states that, after obtaining indictments against James Bove, one of the international vice presidents, he is continuing his investigation.

Inquiry Extended

Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly said the grand jury may report in the near future and that its investigation had been extended beyond his expectations. He said there was evidence of "the misappropriation of hundreds of thousands of dollars in union funds."

The probe began here with a "visit" to the El Patio Restaurant, where Federal alcohol tax agents said they found $50,000 in liquor with no floor tax paid. Of this sum, $19,000 worth was purchased with union funds, Fihelly said.

Now the inquiry has broadened to probes of construction labor activities at Camp Springs, Cedar Point and Quantico military bases.

In these places, the locals within the mother international, held labor contracts. This is the union which for 30 years never had a general election or a convention.

In this union there is a backbone of common laborers who earn their living by toil. Most of its leaders have clear records.

On the other hand, there was Gessele Capone, officer of a Brooklyn local, and who went to jail for 20 years on a charge of using Murder, Inc. to liquidate his opposition. There was Norman Redwood, who rose to power with the aid of the highups, but was later found slain in a Teaneck, N. J. gutter. Sam Nuzzo is under a 20-year jail sentence for embezzling $30,000, and Nick Carozzi, friend of Alfonse Capone, died leaving $200,000 in back taxes unpaid. They also were leaders.

Opposition Periodical

But among the rank and file, opposition has arisen periodically. Under the tutelage of Hyman N. Glickstein, a leading labor lawyer of New York, suits and trials have begun in numerous cities.

Forty of the men, who claim to represent the union membership majority, began the probe here and already had filed suit to stop Kelly and collect $150,000 from him and others they charged were engaged in a Nation-wide "dues-collecting racket" when the international officers were still sitting tight.

Moreschi backed the other leaders. The rank and file made numerous appeals to William Green, head of the American Federation of Labor, with which the laborers' union is affiliated. Green backed Moreschi.

Moreschi has refused to waive his right to immunity before the grand jury, stating he is conducting an investigation of his own.

Beside Mrs. Kelly, the other witnesses to testify today are Moreschi's son, Faust, and an auditor.

Chinese Admit Loss of Changteh, Hunan Gateway

Chungking, Dec. 7 (AP).—Loss of the vital rice bowl city of Changteh, after 15 days of siege by the Japanese was admitted by the Chinese high command today in a communique which said the ancient city fell December 3.

The loss of Changteh was taken here to mark the opening of the fourth battle for Changsha, capital of Hunan Province in central China, which the Japanese often have reached but never held.

CIO Union is Victor In Fairchild Election

By the Associated Press

The National Labor Relations Board reported yesterday it had certified the United Automobile Workers (CIO) as collective bargaining agent for employes of the Fairchild Engine & Airplane Corp. aircraft plant at Hagerstown, Md.

The board ruled that the union now may bargain for plant firemen and guides as well as for the militarized plant-protection workers. The union won elections November 17 and 18 among employes of both groups, the report said.

Reports also said an epidemic of mild influenza has developed in Alexandria and is rapidly reaching "alarming proportions," according to the Alexandria Health Department.

Dr. William Arkell Browne, health officer, said that an outbreak of the disease was first reported in the city during the middle of last week. Hundreds of school children and defense workers have been affected and physicians and druggists have been besieged with requests for medical attention, it was said.

The Eastern area office of the American Red Cross at 615 North St. Asaph st., Alexandria, stated "a considerable portion of the office personnel is out." Dr. Browne declared.

The health officer said that it strikes suddenly and lasts from three to four days in most instances. It is accompanied by high fever, headaches, bodily pain and some stomach and intestinal upsets, he added.

Many Respiratory Cases

District hospitals reported a full load of respiratory cases. Gallinger was sending all flu cases home in order to have room for pneumonia cases, and Garfield reported 150 per cent more respiratory cases than usual and cases turned away. Some of the urgent cases have been taken into the emergency room and isolated there until space was available. Doctors reported beds all full and a long waiting list, while Emergency, Sibley, and Georgetown reported heavy loads. Only Freedmen's said they were not overly crowded with flu patients.

Dr. Cumming said young adults seemed to be most stricken, although schools are also reporting an unusual amount of illness. For the past two weeks absence at Roosevelt High has averaged 145 a day, while a few weeks ago the average was about 75 to 85. School nurses are sending home youngsters who are nauseated, have sore throats or fever, accompanied by weakness and aching.

Teacher Absences Greater

The Health Department reported that teacher absences had increased considerably during November of this year over November of last year.

Prince Georges County school children apparently have escaped the epidemic so far, and the only serious outbreak in colds among students in this area has been in Laurel. Majority of the illnesses reported have been in the older age group, Dr. John N. Byers, county health officer, indicated yesterday.

Byers declared there was "unquestionably a serious outbreak of grippe," with many heavy colds and mild cases of 'flu reported. All county doctors have been swamped with calls, he said, and are being asked to report serious cases to the county health office.

Health authorities warned against use of sulfa drugs by the layman for treatment, stating that influenza itself is for the most part a nonfatal disease.

urged citizens who have been overcharged to communicate with his office at once.

How much whisky is reaching illegal channels or the black market, Laskey said he could not estimate, although he said it was considerable.

Whisky Scarce

It was virtually impossible to obtain whisky in legal markets in Washington yesterday, reflecting in part what officials said was due to the black marketers. Liquor dealers, who had an adequate supply of gin, brandy and rum on hand, said they could get little or no whisky from their wholesalers.

As to the black market practices here, Laskey said there were numerous instances of arrangements for underhanded transactions, tie-in sales and other trick ways of violating the OPA ceiling.

2 D. C. Men Held In Silver Spring Gambling Raid

Two Washington men were arrested by Prince Georges County police and charged with operating a lottery after a raid on an alleged gambling establishment in Hyattsville yesterday afternoon.

Police gave their names as Thomas E. Adams, 54, of 3232 13th st. nw., and Henry E. Pons, 47, of 3023 14th st. nw. Adams is being held under $1000 bond and Pons under $500 bond for trial in county police court before Judge Walter L. Green in Hyattsville December 20.

Police said the establishment, which was on the second floor over a beer establishment in the 5100 block of Baltimore ave., contained telephones, numbers slips, a radio and other equipment for numbers and racing betting. No "customers" were in the place at the time of the raid, police said.

Latin Question

Sen. Guffey Says Butler Cheered Axis

By the Associated Press

Ridiculing Senator Butler's (Republican) of Nebraska recent report on United States spending in Latin America, Senator Guffey (Democrat) of Pennsylvania asserted in the Senate yesterday that Reader's Digest magazine had used the Nebraska Republican as "the cat's paw in a bit of journalistic ghost writing which brings joy to the heart of every Axis agent in this hemisphere."

Guffey charged that Butler's tour of South and Central American republics last summer "was undertaken under the auspices of the Readers Digest," that he was accompanied by Maurice K. Mumford, a member of the magazine's research staff, and that an article carried under Butler's name in the Digest was "put . . . into acceptable magazine form" by Dr. Stanley High.

Guffey said Dr. High, employed by the Democratic National Committee in 1936, recently had been "ghost-writing magazine articles for the opposition party."

Charges Attack on Roosevelt

Guffey, chairman of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, added:

"Senator Butler undoubtedly did not realize the facts of the case when he went to South America, under such sponsorship, and undoubtedly did not realize that what the Digest wanted was not the real facts but facts which might be used against Roosevelt, against the New Deal, without heed for the effect on the good neighbor policy, the foreign relations and the international friendships cultivated by this Administration."

For "some time now," Guffey charged, the Reader's Digest "has devoted itself to the purpose of overthrowing the present Administration."

The Butler article on his findings in Latin America appeared in Reader's Digest prior to submission of his report on the trip to the Senate. The Nebraskan said he had originally planned the trip as a vacation, to mingle with fellow-Rotarians, and subsequently altered his plans to investigate U.S. spending in that area, hiring Mumford to act as his aide and adviser.

Says Trips Cost Him $4000

He stated Mumford had nothing to do with the Digest article, that the trip cost him between $4000 and $5000 and that he had received nothing from the Digest, adding that any financial return from it would be a welcome "windfall" in meeting his expenses.

In Chappaqua, N. Y., DeWitt Wallace, editor of the Reader's Digest, denied the magazine was anti-Administration, and asserted that it was Senator Butler's own idea to investigate Administration activities in South America, and that the organization followed "our usual practice of paying for all material appearing in the magazine."

Wallace said:

"It was Senator Butler's idea and his alone that he go to South America to investigate Administration activities there. The Reader's Digest did not pay his expenses. We learned that he planned to make the trip, hence we secured his promise to let us have first chance to publish any magazine article that might result.

"Upon Senator Butler's return, Stanley High, one of our editors, was assigned to help put the Senator's copy in final shape for magazine publication. As almost everyone knows, it is a commonplace practice for staff writers connected with magazines to give assistance to Government officials in writing articles, just as it is customary for busy public officials to seek the collaboration of professional writers in preparing speeches.

Material Pail For

"After the Digest accepted Senator Butler's piece, we followed our usual practice of paying for all material appearing in the magazine. There is no justification whatsoever for any charge of irregularity of any sort.

"There is no evidence the Digest is anti-Administration. We have always felt it was a proper function of a magazine to be critical of the abuses of Government regardless of the party in power. If the Republicans should ever come into power, we shall certainly be just as critical of their Administration. We have published many articles favorable to the present Administration and shall continue to do so."

Congressmen Back From South Praise 'Neighbor' Policy

By the Associated Press

A recommendation that the United States seek continued use of Ecuador's Galapagos Islands after the war as a defense outpost for the Panama Canal came today from a House committee which urged also that understandings be reached now on postwar commercial use of other bases this country has built in Latin America.

Just back from a flying inspection tour of such bases, the group, headed by Representative Merritt (Democrat) of New York, reported the "Good Neighbor policy has been highly profitable to our friends and advantageous to us" but that there had been "poor planning" by some Federal agencies and "bungling tactics by amateur good-will emissaries."

Its general findings contrasted with the complaint of Senator Butler (Republican) of Nebraska, also recently returned from South America, that the Administration is throwing away billions of dollars below the border and that most Latin Americans regard this country as a "sucker."

Administration officials have denied the substance of Butler's report and Senator Guffey (Democrat) of Pennsylvania took him to task in the Senate yesterday. Guffey, noting that Reader's Digest published an article on Butler's findings before the Nebraskan presented them to the Senate, said Butler's tour was sponsored by the magazine.

Guffey said the editors of the magazine owed an apology to Butler "whom they have made to appear an international fool," and to the Senate, the governments and the people of all the American nations.

Butler told reporters he wished to make no reply to Guffey at the moment "and I don't know that I ever will."

"I cast no slur on anyone in Latin America," he added.

Report in House Group

The House group, a subcommittee of the Military Affairs Committee, made a 14,567-mile trip last month to bases as far south as Rio de Janeiro. Reporting to the full committee, it said defense of the Western Hemisphere "has been effectively and zealously carried out" with "an encouraging degree of cooperation from our neighbor republics," but added:

"We must stress the fact that the unsettled questions about the future utilization of American-built bases are vital and pressing ones whose disposition should not longer be delayed."

Group's Recommendations

It also recommended that:

1. Mexican troops be sent into active war theaters, "for in no other way can the Mexican people feel that they are active participants and full-fledged allies in the global struggle."

2. The bomb-proofing of Panama Canal lock machinery be completed.

3. American troops on duty at Caribbean islands and South American bases be transferred or given furloughs after 12 months' service.

4. Joint economic councils be established by this country "and several of the Central and South American republics to foster trade and understanding in peacetime.

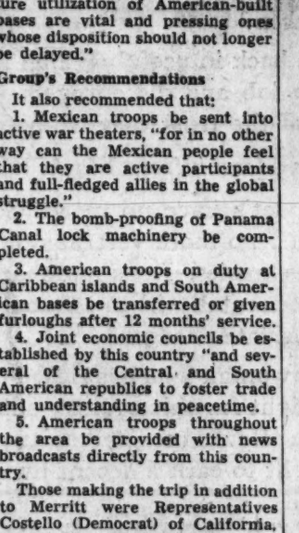
5. American troops throughout the area be provided with news broadcasts directly from this country.

Those making the trip in addition to Merritt were Representatives Costello (Democrat) of California, Brooks (Democrat) of Louisiana, Durham (Democrat) of North Carolina, Sikes (Democrat) of Florida, Winstead (Democrat) of Mississippi, Short (Republican) of Missouri, and Leroy Johnson (Republican) of California.

King Farouk Recovers From Auto Crash Injury

Cairo, Dec. 7 (AP).—King Farouk I, apparently fully recovered from a hip injury suffered November 15 in an automobile accident, returned to Abdin Palace today from the hospital.

Farouk, wearing a field marshal's uniform, stood in the pale-green royal automobile and saluted crowds which lined the thoroughfares. The troop-lined streets were decorated with flags. Egyptian Air Force planes flying overhead dropped candies and flowers.



Officer Says Japs Can Be Beaten Without Invasion

Cairo, Dec. 7 (AP).—One of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's staff officers today declared, "I think we can beat Japan without landing an expeditionary force on the Japanese mainland."

The officer maintained the Japanese could be throttled by combined American Air Force and naval action with the isolation or recapture of the Netherland East Indies, a source of supply on which the enemy leans heaviest. He said the Americans are confident this island group can be retaken.

To attempt to land troops on the Japanese mainland would be the most difficult and most costly method of subduing the Japanese, the officer said, adding that the main hope of the enemy now was to make the war so expensive America will shrink from carrying it through.

Possible Political Use of UNRRA Funds Admitted by Acheson

Fears that the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration might be used as a political weapon by refugee governments not wholly representative of their countries were expressed yesterday by members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee as Assistant Secretary of State Dean Acheson began a play-by-play report to Congress on what happened in Atlantic City at the first meeting of UNRA's council.

"The problem that bothers you is a real one but not a soluble one," the State Department official told Representative Bolton (Republican) of Ohio, after continued questioning by her and other members. "We cannot set up a super state. We must deal with the recognized authority."

No "Freezing" Function

The question of who is the recognized authority, he said, is not for UNRRA to decide—but the "chiefs of states and foreign governments." He denied emphatically that the UNRRA agreements on relief and rehabilitation serve to "freeze" any government in power.

Mrs. Bolton declared she thought all UNRRA products should be carefully labeled to lessen the danger of their use for local political purposes and "prevent any misunderstandings such as we had because lend-lease goods were not at first definitely marked as such."

The committee had before it a letter from Secretary of State Hull urging congressional authorization of funds "for full and effective participation by this country" in UNRRA work.

"The broad plans growing out of the Moscow conference, which Congress has so warmly indorsed," Secretary Hull wrote, "will need the work of this great organization to insure, in the words of the 44-Nation declaration, 'a rapid transition from war to peace.'"

Mere Reaffirmation

Representative Vorys (Republican) of Ohio, asked Acheson if the machinery for financing UNRRA had not already been provided in the Lend-Lease Act. Oscar Cox, Assistant Solicitor General, supplied the answer that provision for supplying relief in liberated countries had been made in the Lend-Lease law, which the appropriations committee could merely reaffirm.

"Although it might be legal to do it some other way," Acheson said, "this whole question of UNRRA is being presented in a forthright way to Congress."

Chairman Bloom (Democrat), of New York, said he knew of no person opposed to UNRRA and that witnesses for the remainder of the week would be Foreign Economic Administrator Leo T. Crowley and UNRRA Director General Herbert Lehman. It was pointed out Lehman is now an internatoinal official and will be "invited" to appear before the committee rather than "asked."

Acheson said UNRRA's part in relief and rehabilitation would account for only about 5 to 10 per cent of the work done in those fields, pointing out many of the occupied countries could assume nearly all the burden of restoring their economies and all of them would contribute what they could.

"UNRRA is not asking for and could not ask for funds to feed all Europe and Asia," he said. "It is not even asking for funds to pay for all the imported goods going into the devastated areas."

"It is asking only for funds with which to buy imports in the outside world for those countries who have no gold and no foreign exchange and no way of getting it, to tide them over the critical period," he said. Many of these purchases, he said, will be paid for in domestic currency, which UNRRA will use for other activities within the country.

Ninety per cent of this country's contribution will be spent for this country's goods, under terms of the UNRRA agreement.

In addition to the purchase of imports, UNRRA will need funds to finance a replacement plan for millions of persons driven from their homes "and over the return of which some international control must be exercised," Acheson said, and to finance a health program that is part of the general relief and rehabilitation picture.

Chevy Chase Man's Destroyer Unit Bags 6 Nip Planes

Aboard a Destroyer off Gougainville in the Solomons, Dec. 2 (AP). (Delayed).—Between 20 and 25 Japanese planes vainly attempted tonight to bomb and torpedo a squadron of destroyers out of existence but lost at least six, and possibly more, planes during nearly an hour's action with only minor damage to one ship to show for it.

The destroyers were providing the outer screen for a convoy moving supplies and reinforcements to the American beachhead on the west-central coast of Bougainville at Empress Augusta Bay. All the ships arrived intact at their destination, and losses were confined to two barrage balloons.

Capt. Arleigh A. Burke, 4600 Langdrum ln., Chevy Chase, Md., was in command of the destroyer squadron.

Michigan Draft Board Resigns

Saginaw, Mich., Dec. 7 (AP).—All three members of Saginaw County's Draft Board No. 3 submitted their resignations today in protest against State Selective Service policies they declared were making "draft dodger havens" of Saginaw war industries.

The members, State Representative John P. Schuch, Attorney Hugo E. Braun and George Holcomb, charged "far too many young men are being deferred in defense plants."

Churchill Sees Enemy at Bay Next Year

Somewhere in North Africa, Dec. 3 (Delayed) (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill climbed onto a jeep before his old regiment today and in confident tones said he hoped the enemy would be brought to bay in 1944.

Wearing a snug, light khaki uniform with three rows of campaign ribbons, the pips of a colonel (honorary), and carrying a stick and gloves, the Prime Minister told the regiment—the Queens Own Hussars, now tank troops instead of cavalry—that the war was proceeding satisfactorily but the tenacity of the enemy must not be underrated.

Twice before, Churchill had inspected the regiment, which is 250 years old and has seen some of the toughest action—in Greece, Crete and the desert. He viewed them when the Hussars were "few and far between before El Alamein," and in Cypress at the time of the Casablanca conference.

"The war is going well," he said. "But we must not underrate the tenacity of the enemy, who fights with his usual veteran skill, and of course when he is beaten he will not have a good time of it, so he will be tenacious to the end.

"But I hope that in 1944 we will bring him to bay."

He did not include Japan in this hope.

South Threatens Vote Bill Revolt

Urges Guffey to Resign

"I want to say that the sooner Guffey resigns from this position, the better it will be for the Democratic Party." He declared Guffey "has been strutting around like a pouter pigeon in the reflected glory of an honor, in the administration of which he has shown very barren results."

The Virginian denied the Eastland-McKellar-McClellan substitute, retaining control of soldier voting in the States, will deprive servicemen of the right to vote. Byrd disclosed he has called on Governor Colgate Darden of Virginia "to initiate a movement to secure uniform voting regulations among the States." He told newsmen that Senators who supported the substitute bill may join in a letter to all Governors urging them to speed State action to assure soldiers the vote, action which he said, "would be the best possible vindication of States' rights."

Senator Guffey told newsmen he has been planning to resign as Senate Democratic chairman as his Republican colleague is up for re-election next year. Under Senate practice, a Senator does not serve on the committee when there is a Senate contest in his State.

"No Threats Will Scare" Guffey

Guffey told the Senate Byrd had correctly quoted his Saturday newspaper statement, adding: "The Senator may go as far as he desires. No threats will scare me from doing what I think is my duty."

Guffey said "Joe Pew's agent was on the floor of the Senate twice last week at the time the soldier vote bill was under discussion." He said the "agent" was a former Senator.

Guffey commented on indirect references by Byrd and Bailey to Guffey's 1921 indictment by a 12-to-11 vote of a Federal grand jury in New York for alleged embezzlement of public funds as a former Alien Property custodian. Guffey said the grand jury investigation was instituted by "Harry Daugherty and his Ohio gang."

Case Was Nolle Prossed

"Six or seven years later the case was nolle prossed," Guffey said. "I never engaged a lawyer."

Bailey told the Senate he was making no attempt to reply to Guffey's charges because of "the source," but at one point he remarked: "I have never been indicted, and the Senator from Virginia has never been indicted."

At another point Bailey said: "Pennsylvania has produced some lofty men—Ben Franklin, William Penn. Then it has produced some others—Thad Stevens, Boise Penrose, Mr. (William S.) Vare and the junior Senator from Pennsylvania."

Atlanta Wants Fair Employment Office Removed

Atlanta, Dec. 7 (AP).—Atlanta's city council, asserting "the race situation can best be handled by local people," is seeking removal from Atlanta of a Southeastern regional office of the President's Committee on Fair Employment.

A resolution adopted by council last night declared, "We call upon our Representatives in the National Congress to insist upon the removal of the said office from the City of Atlanta." The appeal to the Congressmen was prefaced by the charge that "mixed employment of the races" was planned in one or more Atlanta office buildings.

The regional office was opened here last week to expedite the handling of charges of discrimination because of race, creed or color in war work.

Byrnes Pictures Inflation Peril

and the bloodiest battles of the war are ahead of us . . . We on the home front must fight harder than ever to win the war and stop the dying—to win the peace and make it lasting . . . We cannot afford to rest on our oars . . . This is no time for us to take our eye off the target."

Disclaiming any intention to "paint the picture blacker than it is," Byrnes said that "we can be proud" of the job done thus far.

"It would therefore be tragic, if after having held the line as well as we have, we should let it go as we start on what we hope is the final lap of the war.

"Tragic, because increased wages and increased prices will mean a price structure so high that at the end of the war we will not be able to sell in the markets of the world. When we cannot sell our goods, it will mean unemployment. Tragic, because at a time when we should be using the power of a great and prosperous Nation to insure permanent peace, we will be forced to devote our energies to establishing relief projects to provide temporary jobs for returning soldiers."

He branded talk of "controlled inflation" as "just as criminally reckless as a proposal for a controlled flood, or a controlled forest fire or a controlled epidemic of smallpox."

Pointing out that higher prices would penalize the unorganized workers and those on fixed incomes who already are under a "great hardship," Byrnes said that the anti-subsidy bill "as now written is in effect a bill to increase the cost of living."

"If it becomes law," Byrnes said, "it will immediately increase food prices 7 per cent and the cost of living more than 3 per cent."

He warned that a death sentence to food subsidies could backfire and hurt the farmer, since many farm-bloc approved "support price" programs cost money to maintain.

He defended the War Labor Board's coal wage decision, adding, "the lesson to be drawn from the coal case is not that we should hold the line less firmly, but more firmly. It illustrates the danger of trying to find ways out of hard cases."

Union to Seek Pay Rise For Clothing Workers

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America (CIO) said tonight it would "open up" the question of a general wage increase for 325,000 workers in the Nation's clothing industry.

The union in a statement said it was taking the action "in the light of rising living costs and the failure of Congress to implement President Roosevelt's seven-point program for national economic stabilization."

WHAT THEY SAY . . .

"We must, this time, have plans ready for the return to civilian life of our gallant men and women in the armed services—instead of waiting to do a hasty, inefficient and ill considered job at the last moment."

President Franklin D. Roosevelt, July 28, 1943

"...a matter which I think deserves the greatest attention in order that our injured boys may receive the consideration that they so justly deserve. . . . Disabilities, no matter how honorably gained, remain present, but the cause is soon forgotten."

Hon. Charles S. Dewey, United States Representative From Illinois

"Proper care and rehabilitation of our war casualties is a sacred obligation of the nation. Thanks to efforts like these we may hope that never again, with respect to such casualties, will it be said that this democracy is lacking in gratitude."

Leo T. Crowley, Director, Office Economic Warfare

IS THIS HIS REWARD?

Hail the conquering hero . . . But don't forget him!

When the shouting and the tumult dies . . . when his bonus is spent and his sacrifices are forgotten . . . what then?

Will he be back in useful civilian life . . . or, with no money, no job and discouraged, will he be a grim reminder of the trust that we betrayed?

Let's learn a lesson from World War I!

This time, let's have no more "Soldier Boy" apple vendors . . . no more veterans' bread lines . . . no more bonus armies. Let's not abandon the seriously maimed or mentally ill to live out hopeless lives as public or private charges.

No man or woman who has risked death or sacrificed health to fight for this country should be denied the best we can offer in medical treatment, rehabilitation and the right to earn a decent livelihood!

AMERICA FACES A CHALLENGE!

Already the wounded are coming back from the battlefields in growing numbers. They're a brave lot who have paid with broken bodies and shattered nerves for the democracy we enjoy and the victory we must win. Thanks to the miracles of modern medicine, far more of the casualties will be saved to live than in the last war — but many more of the living will come home crippled.

Their rehabilitation is our paramount obligation—not in the dreamy future, but now—today. How can this be accomplished? (1) Unify existing veterans' laws; (2) Simplify procedure for prompt attention and proper care for all cases; (3) Provide adequate rehabilitation facilities and centralized direction through comprehensive legislation so that no serviceman is neglected.

The power to act lies in Washington. It is up to you and your neighbors to create in your community a demand for action.

READ THESE BOOKLETS . . .

"Wounded Soldiers Come Home" and "They Can't Eat Medals" contain 32 articles on veterans' rehabilitation problems which were published by The Milwaukee Journal, as part of its continuing study on this subject. A limited number of copies are available free.

Stalin, Pleased With Meeting, Izvestia Says

Moscow, Dec. 7 (AP).—The satisfaction of the Soviet government with the results of the Teheran conference was expressed today through its newspaper Izvestia in a statement that President Roosevelt, Premier Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill "adopted decisions which will have a historical significance on the fate of the world."

The emphatic editorial, which will be read by millions from western battlefronts to the Pacific, left no doubt that Stalin and his advisers were deeply pleased with what they learned from their Allies.

Izvestia referred in a sweeping, friendly fashion to the accomplishments of the British and American Armies in North Africa, the Mediterranean and southern Italy and gave Russia's Allies due honor for their contribution toward winning the war.

"The success of the Red army and the success of the Allies quickened the pace of the war and gave even greater strength to the cooperation in the war between the Allied countries," it said.

Russian people reflected the same opinion.

There were wide smiles on the faces of the thousands on Moscow's streets today as they walked away from the newspaper kiosks after gazing at the pictures of the three leaders sitting as friends on the porch of the Soviet Embassy at Teheran.

Izvestia said the decision of the three leaders as to the time and place of the "second front appears to be the greatest triumph of the coordinated strategy of the coalition against the common enemy."

Turning to the question of continued collaboration after victory, Izvestia said, "All freedom-loving people will express satisfaction and approval of the common policy the Allies expressed in the solemn declaration of the President, the Premier and the Prime Minister."

Landon Confers With Dewey; Hails Him as Nominee

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—Alf M. Landon of Kansas, 1936 Republican presidential nominee, conferred today with Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York and then hailed him as "the outstanding Republican possibility of the Republican nomination next year." Dewey declined to comment.

Landon said the conference was "nonpolitical," with talk devoted chiefly to postwar business and employment and to the present and future oil situation.

Landon said he would confer tomorrow with former President Herbert Hoover. Dewey said he would return to Albany after a two-week vacation at Sea Island, Ga., and would not see Hoover.

Speeding to Class At 48 Miles Costs Professor $20

The alibi of Dr. George B. Wood, dean of American University and English professor, that he was endeavoring to be on time for a class didn't work yesterday in Traffic Court. Dr. Wood was fined $20 for driving 48 miles an hour on Rock Creek Parkway.

"The class was waiting for me, and if I didn't arrive on time, they might have thought I wasn't coming and probably wouldn't have waited," Dr. Wood was quoted as saying.

"I suppose that was quite a dilemma but I'm afraid the court must uphold the law regardless," Judge Neilson replied.

Dr. Wood, who is 65 years old, resides at 4331 Cathedral ave. nw.

Diapers Go to Arabs' Heads, Bridges Asserts

Arabs in North Africa are wearing lend-lease diapers as headdresses, while mothers here are complaining of the shortage of that essential item of an infant's wardrobe, Senator Styles Bridges (Republican) of New Hampshire reported yesterday.

In his self-appointed role as one-man investigator of the diaper dearth, Senator Bridges said he learned from Army officers returning from North Africa that some of the lend-lease diapers are being utilized for chapeaux.

Hearings to Open On Liquor Shortage

A Senate judiciary subcommittee decided yesterday to begin hearings in its investigation of liquor shortages with testimony Friday by Stewart Berkshire, deputy commissioner of internal revenue, on alcohol withdrawals from bonded warehouses.

Chairman Van Nuys (Democrat) of Indiana, said the committee already has gathered information which indicates there is available now—despite the lapse in whisky making due to war alcohol production—a supply of liquor which would last more than three years at normal rates of consumption.

Text of Statement on Parley With Inonu

Cairo, Dec. 7 (AP).—Following is the communique issued here tonight:

Mr. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America; M. Ismet Inonu, President of the Turkish Republic, and Mr. Winston Churchill, Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, met in Cairo on December 4, 5 and 6, 1943.

Mr. Anthony Eden, His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs; M. Numan Menemencioglu, Minister of Foreign Affairs of Turkey, and Mr. Harry Hopkins took part in their deliberations.

Participation in this conference of the head of the Turkish state, in response to the cordial invitation addressed to him by the United States, British and Soviet Governments, bears striking testimony to the strength of the alliance which unites Great Britain and Turkey, and to the firm friendship existing between the Turkish people and the United States of America and the Soviet Union.

Presidents Roosevelt and Inonu and Prime Minister Churchill reviewed the general political situation and examined at length the policy to be followed, taking into account the joint and several interests of the three countries.

The study of all problems in a spirit of understanding and loyalty showed that the closest unity existed between the United States of America, Turkey and Great Britain in their attitude to the world situation.

The conversations in Cairo have consequently been most useful and most fruitful for future relations between the four countries concerned.

The identity of interests and of views of the great American and British democracies with those of the Soviet Union, as also the traditional relations of friendship existing between these powers and Turkey, have been reaffirmed throughout the proceedings of the Cairo conference.

Miss Alice Clapp Leaves Fortune To Red Cross

Miss Alice Clapp, Washington philanthropist, who died here November 29, willed to the Red Cross the bulk of an estate estimated to run into hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The amount of the estate will not be definitely known until the will enters the probate division of District Court, but in her lifetime Miss Clapp supported musical and charitable organizations.

Approximately $84,000 and a $25,000 trust fund is to go to relatives, friends, employes and institutions here, Miss Clapp's will states.

Children's Hospital, the Glenn Dale Sanitarium and the Salvation Army are each to receive $10,000. A cousin, Mary McLain, is to received $20,000 and a small trunk of silver. A friend, Miss Hattie Burdette, of 1835 K st. nw., was bequeathed $20,000. Miss Clapp's chauffeur, Elmer King, was left $10,000 "for long and faithful service." There are several other bequests and the rest will go to the Red Cross. A $25,000 trust fund is willed to the District Chapter of the Red Cross.

Municipal Court Income Increases

Municipal Court cases have averaged a reduction of 503 a month during the summer quartely period as compared to the preceding six months, Chief Judge George B. Barse reported yesterday to District Commissioners.

During the quarterly period commencing July 1 and ended September 30, 29,943 new civil and criminal cases were filed, he reported.

Holiday Leaves Cut To Restrict Travel

The Army said last night that its policy of limiting Christmas and New Year furloughs to 10 per cent of the strength at any Army post would be in effect again this year, and for the same reason limited transportation facilities.

Furloughs are held to 14 days, and post commanders are instructed to arrange them so that men will not travel to or from military reservations on Christmas Eve or Christmas day. One-day passes to enlisted men for Christmas and New Year's will be counted as part of the 10 per cent quota.

U. S. Air Force in England Gets Six More Great Airdromes

A U. S. Bomber Base in England, Dec. 7 (AP).—Six great new airdromes for the United States Air Force were dedicated today by Lieut. Gen. Jacob L. Devers, who declared "Germany must surrender unconditionally or be annihilated."

At ceremonies held on the second anniversary of Pearl Harbor the American commanding general in the European theater said planes from the new bases and from approximately 100 other American airfields in Britain would blacken the skies over enemy territory.

"We are building airports so that our fighting planes and bombers may assist in carrying out the world strategy recently co-ordinated decisively at Cairo and Teheran," Devers said, asserting that the epitaph of Germany and Japan is already written.

$40,000,000 Investment

Four of the new airdromes are heavy bomber bases, the fifth is an advanced heavy bomber repair depot and the sixth an advanced fighter repair depot.

Altogether they represent a 40 million dollar investment with 2100 buildings and mass concrete runways equal to a two-lane highway from New York to Baltimore.

Philip D. Reed, British lend-lease administrator, pointed out at the ceremonies that while labor and machinery to build the bases came from the United States, sites and building material were furnished by Britain.

1,500,000 Man-Hours Each

All airdromes were constructed by Army Engineers and aviation troops and one by battalions composed entirely of Negro soldiers.

Maj. Gen. Idwal H. Edwards, Devers' chief of staff, said "one and a half-million man-hours of good, hard work goes into the building of each of these new fields. During November bombers of the Eighth Air Force dropped about 15 million pounds of bombs on targets in Europe—10 pounds of destruction for every one of those tough hours."

D. C.-Annapolis Road Projected

Washington and Annapolis, Md., will be connected by a dual high-speed highway if a proposal submitted to Governor O'Conor yesterday is carried out.

State Senator Dulin (Democrat) of Anne Arundel said he made the suggestion to the Governor and urged the cost of such a project be included in the State Roads Commission postwar plans.

Senator Dulin said the Governor was "in full accord" and had promised to consult the Maryland State Planning Commission on the matter. Dulin recently organized a county legislative postwar planning committee.

Allied Promise Spurs Serbs to New Gains

London, Dec. 7 (AP).—Yugoslav partisans, stubbornly holding open a breach in Hitler's southeastern Balkan defenses in anticipation of an Allied southern invasion as promised at the Teheran conference, tonight reported fresh, small, hard-won victories against Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's Nazi invaders.

Meanwhile the political situation in Yugoslavia was agitated by an order issued in Cairo by Gen. Draja Mihailovic, commander of the Yugoslav Patriot forces, for all guerilla troops in the country to submit themselves to his authority.

In the past there have been reports of clashes between Mihailovic's Patriots and the Partisan forces of Gen. Josip Broz (Tito), and Mihailovic's order, which threatened punishment to armed groups which refused to submit to his leadership, was expected to increase the tension.

Tito reported clear-cut successes in Slovenia and said his Partisans were engaged in, as yet, indecisive fighting along the line of the Sarajevo-Mostar railway, one of the main enemy communications in Yugoslavia.

The bulletin told of "heavy losses" for the Nazis generally in fighting in Slovenia Province and especially along the area of the upper Adriatic coast; the capture of the town of Turyak near Ljubljana, and successful Partisan attacks in other localities.

United States heavy bombers lending support to the Partisan campaign smashed at two Athens airports and downed 10 Nazi fighters. British bombers struck at German targets on Leros and Salamis.

Jury Selected In Anaconda Wire Fraud Prosecution

Providence, R. I., Dec. 7.—A jury was impaneled today to hear the Government's case against the Anaconda Wire & Cable Co. and five individual defendants charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States.

With the completion of the jury, Federal Judge John P. Hartigan asked opposing counsel if the trial was likely to be protracted. Pat Coon, special assistant to the United States Attorney General, a war frauds division prosecutor in charge of the Government's case, answered it was likely to continue for several weeks.

The company is charged with conspiring to defraud the Government through the sale of defective wire and cable to the Army.

World War II Veterans Sport Discharge Badges

Washington's vets of World War II have begun sporting those honorable discharge buttons—and apparently they prefer to pay 35 cents rather than wait for Army red tape to release them.

Insignia to indicate their service in khaki went on sale yesterday at Lewis & Thomas Saltz, Inc., and are going rapidly, salesmen reported. Qualifiers must show their discharge papers, as well as their money.

Turkish Air Fields Vital to Allied Plans

Nation Guarding Balkan Back Door Has a Potential 2 Million Soldiers

London, Dec. 7 (AP).—Turkey, a nation with a potential of two million soldiers now boldly aligned with the Allies, guards the back-door to the Balkans, and diplomatically is the Achilles heel of Hitler's southeast fortress.

It was Berlin's recognition of this very weakness that sent the suave, ace trouble-shooter of German diplomacy, Franz von Papen, to Turkey as Nazi Ambassador. Now von Papen appears finally to have lost a four-year seesaw struggle.

Turkish entry into the war as a fighting partner would open an Allied drive overland into Bulgaria or Greece and compel Hitler to abandon his Balkan treasure or garrison it heavily from his thinning forces.

Short of actually throwing her weight into war, Turkey might grant invaluable, already-prepared bases for easy air smashes at scattered and battered Nazi war industries, at shaky Balkan satellite capitals and Ploesti's oil fields.

Straddles Dardanelles

Turkey sits astride the Dardanelles, potential funnel to pour more war supplies directly to Russia, or to mass shipping and naval power to the Black Sea for an offensive in concert with Russia against the Rumanian or Bulgarian coasts.

Perhaps the best of Turkey's fine new air bases is at Eskisehir, Anatelia, only about 420 miles from Ploesti. Others are at Istanbul, Ankara, Izmir, and Adana, and from them all the Balkans and particularly Greece are vulnerable.

Nazi targets in Greece might be profitably hammered on a shuttle basis between southern Italy only some 650 miles away.

Effective use of the Dardanelles would depend upon recapture or neutralization of German island bases in the Aegean. But with nearby Turkish air bases, the smaller islands such as Cos, Samos, and Leros, could be made untenable, and the larger key ones of Crete and Rhodes would be laid open for combined assault.

Turkey could contribute an army of about 200,000 troops now under arms, and increase them quickly to 500,000, with another 1,500,000 in reserve. Her soldiers traditionally are brave and hardy, and tough defensive fighters especially.

Little Mechanized Strength

Well-equipped in light arms, field guns, antitank and antiaircraft weapons and artillery, the Turkish army is weak in mechanized equipment. But in the rugged Balkan terrain this would be no great handicap.

Her air force, which numbered but 300 planes in 1940, now is estimated at three to four times that number, thanks to lend-lease and a vigorous training program. The navy is small.

Powerful Allied armies stand ready for action in the Mediterranean.

Hitler now has in southeastern Europe about 23 divisions, plus some 35 satellite divisions of doubtful ability and enthusiasm. He could not reinforce them greatly without risking disaster elsewhere. On the air side, the Germans have only about 500 first-line planes in the Balkan area.

46 D. C. Draftees Will Report for Duty Tomorrow

Duty Kept Bates Off Gripsholm

Since return of the exchange ship Gripsholm last week, a Washington woman has been hoping for word from her husband, still a Jap prisoner in Shanghai because he refused passage home until his entire staff is evacuated from China.

Mrs. J. Nelson Bates, an employe of the British Admiralty here, hasn't seen her husband since she left Shanghai in March, 1941, she said last night. But, much as she would like to be with him today, as other families separated by the war in the Far East are reunited, she understands his position.

"If he thought it was his duty to stay on with his staff," Mrs. Bates explained, "then he would never have been content with personal freedom in this country."

Bates, who has been manager of the North China branch of the Asiatic Petroleum Co. in Shanghai since 1924, was included in early British exchange lists and was first offered passage here in the summer of 1942. His answer was that he preferred to help other members of his staff who were forced to stay in the Jap-held areas.

In the spring of that year, Bates had spent 64 days in Bridge House Prison before he was released under observance to his home in Shanghai. Mrs. Bates, who resides at 2032 Belmont rd. nw., received no word until last May. In March he managed to write that he expected to be placed in a concentration camp in a few days. At that time, he said he was physically, if not mentally, well.

Mrs. Bates came here two years ago when she joined the British Admiralty as a staff relations officer.

Prisoners in Philippines Need Medicines, Repatriate Says

By Edward Mitchell

Four thousand Americans interned at Santo Tomas in the Japheld Philippines have almost exhausted their medical supplies and no additional medicines have ever been received from the United States, Nathaniel P. Davis, inspector in the State Department's Foreign Service, who returned on the Gripsholm from Manila, revealed yesterday.

"The spirit of the internees is excellent, however," Davis said. "I was granted permission to inspect Santo Tomas the day before I left Manila. The prisoners were cheerful, but they have begun to look seedy. The men have aged more than the women. I think it has been found that men have aged more than women in internment camps everywhere. It's probably because the men have business and family worries."

Three other foreign service attaches were interned with Davis and 32 other Government officials in a private house on the outskirts near Manila, and also returned on the Gripsholm. They are George Manlove Abbott, Horatio Tobey Mooers and Charles E. Whitaker.

Not Visited by Red Cross

Davis said that to his knowledge the camp at Santo Tomas has never been visited by a representative of the neutral Swiss government or by the International Red Cross. This is the fault of the Japanese, he said.

The prisoners are self-governed and operate their own public utilities, Davis said. They are allowed about 50 cents a day, which must cover all necessities, including lights and water.

"Next to medical supplies, the prisoners' greatest want is better communication facilities," Davis said. "No letters are reaching there." The official said that he personally received only two letters during his internment. They were from his wife and both arrived in October of 1942.

The war, according to Japanese information dispensed in the Philippines is just one big Jap victory after another, Davis said.

"Jap Planes Never Downed"

"Jap planes are never shot down. They either fall into the sea, dive into an enemy objective or are lost. Every time the Americans take another island it's just another Dunkirk. Sicily was a trap. The Germans let the Allies in so they could inclose them and wipe them out. We'd begun to wonder if Berlin would be just a trap, too."

Counter propaganda is not needed among the Filipinos, however, Davis assured. Immediately after the Japs seized the Philippines, there was talk in the streets that the American troops would be back by April 8 of 1942. When Davis left the word was that the Americans would be back by the end of 1943, he said.

"A Filipino hears an American radio report that a Jap cruiser has been sunk. By the time the story has been told several times, the whole Jap fleet is at the bottom of the ocean."

Americans Popular in Manila

American Government officials were allowed to go unguarded into the Manila business district on specific business, but were made to wear red arm bands. The Filipinos usually walked up and insisted on paying the cab fare or something for the Americans, he said.

Davis was en route to Singapore from San Francisco and had reached Manila when the war broke out. The Japs never attempted to question him on American affairs, and were generally "pretty decent" to him and other American officials held, he said.

In the field of sport, the Redskins are Washington's first choice today. Another first choice—in an entirely different field—is Chestnut Farms Sealtest Vitamin D Homogenized Milk!

And Chestnut Farms has held first place for fifty-odd years . . . since the days of the lightly padded pigskin artists of the last century!

In fact, Washington housewives are now more firmly inclined than ever to use our Sealtest Vitamin D Homogenized Milk. For they know that the scarcity of dairy products has made the nutritional value of this fine milk more precious than ever.

This is why so many regular Chestnut Farms Sealtest Milk customers are changing to our Vitamin D Homogenized Milk. They want their families to have the benefits of the 400 units of Vitamin D added to every quart—as well as the nourishment of the cream which is distributed to every drop of the milk!

Steinbeck Tells How 5 Captors Of Isle Awaited Paratroopers

By John Steinbeck

STEINBECK

The five men from the destroyer moved restlessly about the quay on the Island of Ventatene which they had accidentally, and with five kinds of luck, captured. The paratroopers did not arrive. There was no sign from the destroyer standing off shore and minutes got to be hours. The dark town on the cliff became peopled with imaginary snipers and back on the hill where the Germans had retreated an occasional explosion roared as they blasted more installations. They didn't know how many Americans there were, and there were five, and the Americans did know how many Germans there were, and there were 87. This was very largely in the favor of the Americans, because if the Germans had known—it is not a nice thing to dwell on.

Your impulse when you are alone and not knowing when you are going to be fired on out of the dark is to keep moving, to pace restlessly about and to be very timid about getting a light of any kind behind you. This pacing about is probably the worst thing you can do. According to Bob Capa, who has been in more wars and closer to them than nearly any one now living (and why he is living no one knows), the thing to do is not to move at all. If you sit perfectly still in the dark, he argues, no one knows you are there. It is only by moving about that you give away your position. He also holds that under fire the best thing is to sit still until you know where the fire is coming from. This is a hard thing to do but it must be correct, because Bob Capa is still alive. But every instinct is toward shuffling about and leaving the place where you are. But getting a light behind you is the worst. It seems to burn you in the back and in your mind's eye you can see what a beautiful target you are to some one out in the dark, you and that great black shadow in front of you.

43 Paratroopers Land

There probably is nothing in the world so elastic as subjective time. There is no way of knowing how long it took for those 43 paratroopers to get ashore. It may have been half an hour and it may have been three hours. It felt to the five men ashore like three days. Probably it was about 45 minutes. The dark, hostile island and the dark water gave no comfort. But after an interminable time there was a secret little mutter of engines. Then out in the dark there was a little flutter of light. The boat was asking for directions. One of the officers on the quay got down on his stomach and leaned over the stone parapet and signaled back with his flashlight so that it could not be seen from the island. And at intervals he flashed his torch to guide the boat.

It came out of the dark abruptly; out of the pitch dark it slipped noiselessly and bumped gently against the quay. And it was one of those boats even the name of which the Navy will cut out if I put it in, but the important thing was that there were 43 paratroopers on board. They seemed to flow over the side; they were very quiet. Their captain went to work instantly. He sent out pickets before he had been one minute ashore, and they slipped away up the hill to guard the approaches to the harbor. Some crept up into the town, armed with their rifles and grenades, and they occupied the tops of buildings, and others went down the beaches to watch the seaward approaches. Meanwhile a little gangplank was ashore, and the supplies were coming down onto the quay in the darkness.

Destroyer Shoots at Plane

In the middle of this work there was the growl of a plane overhead. The captain of paratroopers gave a curt order and the men took cover. The plane droned over, and as it got offshore again the destroyer burst into action. She flamed like a flowerpot at an old-fashioned Fourth of July fireworks exhibit. Her tracers spread like a fountain. And then she was dark again and the plane was gone.

The unloading continued until there was a pile of goods on the quay, rations in cases and boxes of ammunition and machine guns and the light sleeping rolls of the paratroopers. They did not bring any luxuries with them. They never do. Food and ammunition are their main interests. They get along with very little else. But on Ventotene they brought water, too, in those handled containers which are used for both water and gasoline. For Ventotene has no water. In other times water barges came out from the mainland. The only local water is that caught in cisterns during the rainy months.

When the supplies were landed the three paratrooper officers and the naval officers gathered in a little stone building on the waterfront. And an electric lantern was on the floor and the doors and windows were shut so that no line of light could show out. The faces were lighted from below and they were strained faces, with the jaw muscles pulled tight. The maps were out again.

Wants to Talk Them Out of It

"I'm not going to throw my men against a bigger force in the dark," the captain of paratroopers said. "Jerry will be trenched by now. I'm not going to move until morning. We've only got half as many men and no artillery."

An officer said: "Maybe—maybe we could talk them out of it. Let's have some of the Italians in and see what we can do. The Jerry doesn't know how many men we have nor how many ships. Let's think about that a little. It's just barely possible we could talk them out of it."

"How?" the captain asked.

"Well, would you let me go up with a white flag in the morning?"

"They'd bump you."

"Would you let me try?"

"Well"——

"Might save a lot of trouble—sir."

"We can't afford to lose officers."

"You won't lose me. Just give me a nod."

The captain looked at him for a long time and then he smiled thinly and his head dipped, almost imperceptibly.

Veto Hinted If 8-Cent Rail Rise Is Granted

The Senate yesterday completed arrangements to call up tomorrow the Truman resolution granting an 8-cents-an-hour flat wage increase to nonoperating railway employes despite probability of a presidential veto if the legislation is passed by both houses.

Some of the Senators most strongly in favor of the wage increase conceded privately that the President will have little choice but to veto the bill in view of the Administration's hold-the-line stand.

This prospect became a virtual certainly last night when Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes, underscoring his firm stabilization policy, warned against enactment of "a special law for a special group without laying down a general policy applicable to all."

Byrnes was backing Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson to the hilt in his position that the increase would scrap the "Little Steel" formula. Few Senators believed the President would override the judgment of both Vinson and Byrnes by signing the bill. To refuse to back them up on what has become a major policy issue might be tantamount to asking for their resignations.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley continued efforts to find a compromise equally acceptable to the Administration and railway labor-management groups, but there seemed slight chance of a settlement before the legislation is called up tomorrow.

While the brotherhoods are asking a flat 8 cents, recommended by a presidential emergency board May 24, Vinson has refused to approve anything beyond recommendations of a second emergency board for a sliding scale of 4 to 10 cents an hour increase.

Yesterday Senator Truman (Democrat) of Missouri reached an agreement with Senate Majority Leader Barkley to call up the 8-cent resolution tomorrow, after the measure failed to come up on the Senate calendar.

Senators declined to speculate on whether Congress would override a presidential veto of the legislation.

After a few stately and graceful steps they suddenly begin to act like a couple of bumble bees on flypaper . . . George Rochey dances on china plates while Manager Dick Lam says dubiously, "I told him to save the pieces. Plates are hard to get." . . . Marshall Rogers' tintinabulation on the musical glasses is the nicest act of its type we've seen . . . The Lotus Dancettes are now being directed by Arlene Garfield, New York musical production expert.

Larry Edwards and Bill Vaughan, both singers, ran a dead heat at the first "Stardust Night" at Restaurant "400." Both received war bonds.

TOM BROWN'S WASHINGTON NIGHTS. Tom Brown, who used to play collegiates in the flickers, is getting around Washington considerably in his new real life role of Air Corps lieutenant. At Olmsted's he was so delighted at the nightly transformation from eatery to bistro, that he vowed he'd copy the idea when he opens a spot after the war. At the Old New Orleans, Tom essayed to cash a check. The waiter thought a check signed Tom Brown was in a class with one signed John Smith. But someone found Manager Gerry Garry and all was merry as New Year's Eve.

topflight Pan-American bandsman, now at the Embassy Room of the Statler Hotel

EDDIE CAMDEN, whose "shuffle rhythm" band opens in the Metronome Room on Friday, is both a singer and a showman on the trumpet. He's a grad of Don Bestor's orchestra, has appeared with Jack Benny on the radio and on many a big commercial. He hails from Caldwell, Ohio.

Tab handsome Justin Stone of the Roosevelt's Victory Room as a young man to watch. No less than three motion picture companies are dickering with his agents. And a top radio spot is already in the Stone bag.

CANARIES A LA MODE. Mildred Kirke, piquant and pretty, is the new singer with Washie Bratcher at the Washington Hotel. Bette Blue will leave the Bratcher Band next week to go to the West Coast with her husband, a Navy doctor, but will return in about a month . . . The delicate gold filigree bracelet worn by Doris Taylor at the Madrillon is a gift from her former arranger, "Red" McCarthy, now in the Mediterranean war theater . . . The charming soprano voice you hear in the Windsor Room these evenings belongs to Nodia Sablukova, former opera star who in private life is Mrs. Matt Windsor . . . Elaine Moore of the King Cole Room has the prettiest dimples! . . . Lovely long hair is possessed by Kay Allen, singer with Carlos Molina's Band at Del Rio, and Terry Sterling of the Anchor Room. Kay bundles her locks up in a net and Terry wears a bun effect at the back of her neck.

WARTIME ANGLES. Treasure Island's Rocco Terrone had a seance with Army doctors yesterday afternoon. His brother, Louis, formerly with the Terrone Orchestra, is now at Camp Lee . . . Dick Abbott's Four at Mayfair have all been classified 4-F, but are valiantly trying to build themselves up by playing golf every day . . . Mally, pretty sister of El Patio's owner, Johnny Longo, married Sergt. John de Floria of Camp Belvoir the other day . . . Dick Bailey, accordionist, is back in the Mayflower Lounge, after receiving an honorable discharge from the Army . . . Miguelito Rodriguez, who used to swing maracas at the Copacabana, is leading a service band at Maxwell Field, Ala.

Longest dance groups around town are those of Ralph Hawkins' Band at Crossroads. They play for a solid 25 minutes—and the danciest pairs are good and ready to sit down.

SHORT TAKES. Lora Gilbert, tricky little pianist at Ciro's, is married to Bud Gilbert, violinist, with Jack Neal's Banner Boys at Hi Hat . . . Les Colvin, pianist with Bert Bernath's Band in the Pall Mall Room, has a huge collection of Dwight Fiske records, says they're wonderful for parties . . . Eddie Fogel's Band at the Dubonnet Room is giving a neat revival of that fantastic oldie, "Dancing on the Ceiling" . . . Slepoushkin, the Balalaika's splendid baritone, is at his best in the beautiful "Song of the Meadow Land" . . . Maestro Harold Hagel of the Carlton's Congo Room reports it's a terrible struggle to write suitable English titles for his new Mexican sambas which have Spanish names a half mile long.

CHRISTMAS SHOPPING:
1. Shop Early—Avoid Last-Minute Rush. If you haven't already finished Christmas shopping, do it at once—you'll find a better choice of gifts, avoid last-minute crowds, save yourself lots of discomfort;
2. Go Shopping Between 10 A.M. and 3 P.M. if you use Street Cars or Buses. You can help war workers—help yourself—help everybody—by avoiding the morning and evening rush hours;
SIX STEPS TO MAKE CHRISTMAS BUYING LESS TRYING
3. Watch the Color of the Car and remember: You board GREEN painted Cars at the REAR—others at the FRONT. Remembering this distinction saves extra steps and time;
4. Have Exact Fare Ready When You Board Street Car or Bus. Please drop Token or Dime into fare box, show weekly Pass clearly as you enter—to help prevent delays which hold you back;
5. Move Away From Fare Box. After paying your fare move along the aisle to the rear—so that others can board easily. You may even find a seat.
NO LAST MINUTE CHRISTMAS SHOPPING FOR ME!
6. Get Off Via "Exit" Door at Center or Rear—instead of where you entered. These steps will make Christmas buying less trying, for you and others—add to the feeling of Good Will and Good Cheer traditional with Christmas.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

THE COMPLETE STORY on mercurial Gen. George Patton is, for some strange reason, still being kept very hush-hush by the Army.

What the War Department doesn't seem to want known is the fact that three high-ranking officers flew from Washington early in August and investigated the Patton affair.

Officially it has been stated that General Eisenhower himself made the decision to let Patton apologize. This has been the War Department's official position, and technically, it doubtless is the truth.

But to the average layman's way of thinking, the War Department came pretty close to handling the whole thing itself. Anyway, here is what happened:

Major Gen. Miller White, assistant chief of staff in charge of army personnel, and Brig. Gen. Russell B. Reynolds, together with a colonel, flew from Washington to North Africa shortly after General Patton abused the shell-shocked soldier in a Sicilian hospital.

In North Africa they picked up Major Gen. Everett Hughes, deputy commander, Chief of Supply, in the North African theater and Eisenhower's right-hand man for North Africa. They then flew to Sicily and investigated the Patton matter carefully.

In Sicily they spent one day with General Patton. He told them of one emotional scene where he had wept and prayed beside the bed of a wounded soldier. He cited this as compensation for abusing two sick soldiers.

In the end, they made a recommendation to General Eisenhower. He accepted the recommendation. Hence technically and officially the responsibility was his.

Eisenhower Opposed Patton

HOWEVER, IT HAS BEEN reported by those returning from North Africa that Eisenhower had planned to send Patton back to the United States. Events which followed appear to substantiate those reports. For General Patton has not been in combat since the unfortunate event in August, and while technically in command of the 7th Army, actually that army has more or less ceased to exist as a combat organization. Its divisions have been fed into General Clark's 5th Army.

Controversy regarding General Patton is not new in the Army, and did not begin with the slaping incident in the Sicily hospital. Ever since he graduated from West Point he has been one of the stormiest and most discussed officers in the Army. Army politics can be as intense as in civilian life—if not more so—and for years General Patton has had stanch defenders and bitter critics.

Many of the incidents involving General Patton have now been reported to certain members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, including his battling polo days when he is reported to have shot a horse which didn't perform satisfactorily. The Military Affairs Committee is being besieged by both Patton friends and Patton critics—Army wives being particularly active, and some of the incidents reported back from North Africa make it easy to understand why Eisenhower was reported to be skeptical about keeping Patton.

One of these occurred shortly after Patton landed in Casablanca, where, according to Constantine Brown, "he behaved with remarkable indiscretion and bad taste." This referred to the fascinating pro-Vichy French society with which the general surrounded himself in his villa outside Casablanca and later at Rabat.

No Politician Patton

ANTI-AMERICAN Gen. Auguste Nogues saw to it that the general did not look for charming pro-Vichy friends at his villa, much to the amazement of the French and Arabs, who knew that Nogues had fired on American troops and imprisoned French officers who aided the United States. Nogues had even gone inland to try to persuade the Sultan of Morocco to declare a holy war against the United States.

Nevertheless, General Patton was on the most intimate terms with Nogues, explaining to friends that he was a soldier, not a politician, and was not interested in Nogues' politics. Their friendship, however, did not encourage other Frenchmen to aid the United States, and eventually Patton himself broke things off when it was suspected that the fascinating society in his villa was reporting back to Nogues every French officer friendly to the USA.

This, and other reports of how the general ordered an Italian peasant's mule shot when it went over a military bridge, and his manner of firing his pearl-handled revolver into the air when dressing down a fellow officer, are all being probed by Senators.

What they are interested in is not so much General Patton, but the broader question of Army promotions. They are wondering about the Army's buck-passing between Washington and Algiers and who was really responsible for keeping Patton on.

They are also skeptical about all Army promotions from now on. Inasmuch as Patton's behavior in the hospital was so studiously kept off his record and his name sent up for promotion regardless, they are wondering how extensive this cover-up system extends.

Unfortunately, one result of the Patton incident may be to work a hardship on other well-deserving officers.

HOUSE DEMOCRATIC caucuses, unlike those held by Republicans, frequently are one long wrangle . . . However, all was sweetness and light when the Democrats caucused to elect veteran Representative Herman P. Eberharter of Pennsylvania to the important Ways and Means Committee . . . So many speeches lauded Eberharter and there was such general agreement about his qualities that Representative Clifton Woodrum of Virginia wound up the secret session by quoting the Biblical proverb: "How pleasant it is for the brethren to dwell together in peace and harmony" . . . During debate on the Soldiers' Vote Bill, Republican Senator Bob Taft of Ohio delivered a long speech charging that the Army and Navy were spreading "political propaganda" for the Administration among the troops in North Africa . . . Replied Democratic Senator Scott Lucas of Illinois: "I am glad I have more confidence than the Senator from Ohio in the two outstanding Republicans who are heading the War and Navy Departments."

Court Metes Out Stiff Penalties To Tipsy Drivers

Judge George D. Neilson in Municipal Court pledged cooperation Monday to the campaign to suppress drunken driving here as he imposed stiff penalties on three men.

Those charged were Jesse G. Robinson, 46, of 2535 13th st. nw.; Leon F. Waters of 307 A st ne., and Spencer Fullerton, no local address.

Neilson said the high incidence of accidents among drinking drivers and the waste of lives and materials in wartime caused by them led him to conclude that he will not be lenient with those convicted of the offense in his court.

Fullerton was given a $150 fine. Robinson, who police said, drove a car which mounted the curb at Lafayette Park and narrowly missed hitting a statue, was given a $100 fine. Waters drew a 30 day jail sentence and a $100 fine.

L. M. Griffin's Death Ruled Accidental

The death of Lloyd M. Griffin, vice president of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. serving the District and the nearby area, was accidental, Dr. Robert Lee Graham, deputy medical examiner of Baltimore, ruled yesterday.

GRIFFIN

Dr. Graham declared that Griffin, who was found shot to death at his Baltimore home Monday night, had apparently been examining a revolver when it accidentally discharged. The bullet entered his temple.

Mr. Griffin joined the east coast branch of the phone company in 1922, when he became general traffic superintendent of the Washington company. He held similar executive positions with the Virginia and Maryland companies until April, 1941, when he was named vice president in charge of personnel and customer relations of the entire firm.

Surviving are his wife, the former Miss Louise Frizell; a son, Capt. Lloyd M. Griffin, jr., USAAF, 26, and a daughter, Betty Jean, 21.

District Churches Will Appeal Sunday for Christmas Homes

Warworkers and women in uniform particularly need Christmas Day hospitality here, according to Donald F. Bautz, director of the Federation of Churches' Defense Commission.

Bautz said yesterday that he has received assurance from Capt. John Simpson, special services officer of the Washington Military District, that all servicemen stationed in this area will be provided with Christmas Day feasts at their posts.

But it is up to Mr. and Mrs. Citizen to make a happy Christmas for the thousands of warworkers and women in uniform scattered in boarding houses, hotels, Government dormitories and other places. The Arlington Farms "dorm" has only cafeteria facilities.

According to Bautz, this Sunday has been designated as "Sign Up Sunday" in Protestant churches, whose pastors will urge their congregations to participate in the "Share Your Home at Christmas" project sponsored by the Defense Commission, with the cooperation of The Washington Post and Government personnel agencies.

Bautz conferred yesterday with Miss Laura Nicholson, executive secretary of the coordinating council of home hospitality, and Chester Junek, chairman of the program committee of the Federal Recreation Committee. The latter committee will meet with Bautz Friday at 10:30 a. m. at Arlington Farms to discuss progress of the "share" project.

Repatriate Describes Filipino Loyalty to U. S.

Japanese "liberators" aren't making any headway with Filipinos, who are so loyal to the United States they were betting two months ago that American troops would be back in Manila by the end of this year.

This was disclosed yesterday by Nathaniel P. Davis of Princeton, N. J., State Department officer who was repatriated on the Swedish exchange liner Gripsholm.

Lieut. Smith, Stage Director, Is Missing

Lieut. T. Frank (Ted) Smith, jr., former director of the Glen Echo Summer Theater, is missing in action, his father, T. Frank Smith, who served in Washington as chief assistant, Cotton Division of the Commodity Credit Corporation, from 1933 to 1940, announced yesterday.

SMITH

The elder Smith, now administrative officer of the Board of Cotton Examiners with the Department of Agriculture in Mobile Ala., said that his son was serving as pilot of a Liberator bomber based in Burma at the time he was reported missing. Stationed there since September, he wrote home on November 1 that he had completed his twelfth mission.

A graduate of Central High School, Lieutenant Smith attended the University of Alabama and Loyola University. During the Italian invasion of Albania, he was in the capital, Tirane, and on his return to America, following a State Department search, described to the Albanian Minister Faik Konitza, the resistance offered by the people to prevent the conquest.

The day after the Japanese attack at Pearl Harbor he joined the Air Corps with his brother, Lieut. A. D. Smith, and was called to active duty in March, 1942. A sister, Miss Maribeth Smith, is a student at George Washington University and lives at Strong Hall.

Board Refuses To Collect Ration Books of Dead

Tulsa, Okla., Dec. 7 (AP).—The Tulsa ration board asserted today that the Office of Price Administration had "robbed death of its dignity" in a campaign to gather up ration books of the deceased.

Writing to OPA Administrator Chester Bowles, the board refused to enforce a new OPA rule requiring undertakers to fill out forms showing names, addresses and relatives of the dead.

"Food has not become so scarce in this country," the letter said, "that death means just another bread card in the family."

Plumping For Slums

Newspaper readers must have been amazed on Sunday morning to note that the Federation of Citizens Associations had voted to recommend abolition of the National Capital Housing Authority. The NCHA has been one of the most constructive influences at work in this city during the last decade. It has made more progress toward wiping out the Capital's rotten slums than had ever been made before. For the Federation of Citizens Associations to brush this fact aside and indulge in a prejudiced smearing of the NCHA is more than a little shocking to those who had believed that the federation reflected community sentiment.

The character of the report is illustrated by its complaint that the NCHA is no longer a local agency but has taken over "activities purely Federal in nature and reaching beyond the District limits." Did the authors of this childish protest ever hear that a war is in progress? Is it possible that they did not know that the necessity of building war housing temporarily diverted the NCHA from its task of rehousing slum dwellers? This one untenable complaint should have been enough to put the federation on notice that its committee on housing had forgotten to keep its feet on the ground.

The interests behind the report come more clearly to the fore in the recommendation that a sum-clearance board be set up in place of the NCHA and that the board should not build any new housing. It would simply demolish slums. Building of low-rent houses would be left entirely to private enterprise. No one is more eager than ourselves to see private enterprise expand its housing activities at the earliest possible moment. But it has been demonstrated over and over again that private enterprise cannot build for the low-income groups who occupy the worst of Washington's slums. The committee's proposal would simply mean that the wretched hovels which now spread disease, vice and vermin through the city would remain untouched, or that their inhabitants would be put out on the streets with no place to go.

We doubt that a report so shot through with prejudice and reaction will deter Congress from giving the NCHA the funds it needs to resume its slum-clearance work. But it does cast a damaging reflection upon those citizen representatives who accepted the report without having a chance to read it or to get an objective view of the NCHA's work. The city expects something better than this of a citizen group that has done excellent work in various other fields.

Looking Backward

Alfred M. Landon, a prewar Republican, is opposed to the suggestion that the two major parties adopt similar declarations on foreign policy. "Such a course," he told freshman Republicans in Congress, "would accelerate the danger of a drift toward one party in our country." The danger, judging from recent election results, is reassuringly remote. Mr. Landon's conclusion, moreover, seems to us to be in the nature of a non sequitur. Republicans and Democrats were able to reach substantial agreement respecting their support of the war effort without amalgamation of their parties. If they are in accord, as many of them seem to be, on postwar purposes, there will undoubtedly be ample room for disagreement over other issues.

But if the Republicans seriously differ with the Administration on foreign policy, it is high time that they made their own program clear to the American people. This is something to which Alfred Landon offers virtually no clew. He offers nothing, indeed, save a vague, oblique and grumbling disparagement of the positive steps taken by the Government toward international collaboration.

The Moscow parley, he declares, was "only a mere beginning." For that matter so was the Constitution of the United States. He hopes with all his heart that his "apprehensions" about the parley "are unfounded." This is simply a way of inciting distrust without affording any basis for it. "I can find no evidence," he remarks, "that the Russians have yielded one inch in regard to their well-known territorial aspirations or political ambitions." One cannot even dignify this sort of talk as criticism. It lacks the candor of outright opposition. In essence it is negativism.

What does Mr. Landon propose in place of the Moscow agreement? We ask the question rhetorically, doubting that he could give an answer or that it would be of much significance. He was the leader of a Republican Party overwhelmingly rejected at the polls because its face was turned to the past and because it offered nothing affirmative to the American people. That party can make its renascence manifest only through leadership which presents to the Nation a positive, constructive program for the future.

Oil After The War

Speaking at the dedication of a Standard Oil plant at Baltimore last week, Senator Brewster very appropriately discussed the supreme importance of petroleum in modern warfare and the necessity of determining what our petroleum policy is to be in the postwar world. Mr. Brewster was one of the five world-circling Senators. He devoted special attention on the journey to the petroleum situation, evidently to good purpose. Neither the tone nor the content of his discussion shows the slightest disposition to criticize our British allies because we have contributed the lion's share of the petroleum products consumed by the United Nations during this war. Indeed, Senator Brewster says that "no question has been raised at any time as to necessity dictating the allocation of petroleum production heretofore because of the mandates imposed by transportation and refinery requirements." This disclaimer ought to dissipate any suspicion that he wishes to sow discord among Allies by acquainting the American people with the facts about our limited oil reserves and the tremendous drains that war has made on them.

With the Mediterranean open for traffic, and the tanker situation improved, it has become possible, as the Senator explains, to utilize the oil reserves of the Middle East to an increasing extent. It is an opportune moment, therefore, to raise the question whether increased refining facilities in that area should not be so located as to utilize British reserves in view of the fact that the United States has been supplying an estimated 80 per cent of the petroleum consumed by the Allied nations. We have to face the fact that wars do not always end wars. And when Petroleum Administrator Ickes warns the American people that this country would not be able to "oil another war," that is equivalent to saying that we should at once take steps to conserve our oil reserves at home and our oil holdings in foreign lands.

It may well be that "scare" predictions about the approaching exhaustion of our reserves are unfounded. Experts point out, in fact, that vast amounts of oil not now accounted for in estimates of reserves could be captured, provided we are willing to spend a great deal more money for each gallon produced. The production of gasoline from coal, oil shale and natural gas is also feasible, but likewise expensive. In extremis the United States could, no doubt, find means of supplementing inadequate petroleum reserves, as Germany has done in this war, by manufacture of synthetic products. But the increased cost of doing so is not represented simply by the additional money expended. The real cost is expressed in terms of manpower, materials and time expended in getting the costlier product. Nobody can possibly estimate the extent of the handicap to Germany of her heavy reliance on synthetic gasoline but it has certainly been tremendous.

So, as a safeguard against being "caught short" in time of war, and as a means of providing for the many new uses of gasoline and other petroleum products after the war, it is imperative to plan now for the future. Senator Brewster asks, therefore, whether we intend to restrict consumption at home. Or shall we energetically acquire and develop resources in other countries? In the latter case, should the Government go into the oil business for itself, should it enter into partnership with private companies, following Britain's example, or should it leave overseas exploitation to private companies, in accordance with American precedents? Whatever the solution—and Senator Brewster would choose continued dependence on private enterprise—the Government itself cannot shift responsibility for seeing that the national interest in peace and in war is duly considered by any American organization, public or private, that undertakes to develop foreign-owned reserves of petroleum.

National Headache

From now on anything that adds to the burden of figuring out our taxes merits nothing but condemnation. For this reason we condemn the latest proposal for "improvement." Representatives of religious and charitable organizations are urging a change in the income tax law to require employers to allow withholding tax credits up to 15 per cent of net income when computing the amount of taxes to be withheld from wages and salaries. The appeal is based on a belief that the present system, which does not allow such credits until final tax returns are made, discourages giving. Although some reductions in contributions may result from this delayed crediting, it seems likely that it is frequently offered as an excuse for failure to maintain contributions that have been cut for more potent reasons. Certainly the advance in income tax rates, the compulsion to pay taxes regularly under the withholding tax system, and the pressure put upon people to buy war bonds afford much more plausible explanations of declines in voluntary donations.

In any case, the suggested remedy, apart from its dubious adequacy for the purpose indicated, would add another complication to an already over-intricate system. The "one more bookkeeping transaction" required of the employer would be a very vexatious one. Furthermore, since the credits would be based on employes' declarations of intention to give, the Treasury would subsequently have to do some checking to determine whether the gifts had actually been made. The additional contributions that might possibly result from the proposed change would, we believe, not warrant the extra expense and the trouble imposed upon employers and Treasury officials. In the nature of the case, allowance cannot be made for all the special circumstances and conditions that result in over-payments and under-payments by individuals subject to the withholding tax. The entire tax system should be overhauled to provide simplification instead of more complication.

Turkish Postscript

The galloping jitters from which the Nazis have been suffering will be considerably aggravated by the Anglo-American-Turkish communique issued at Cairo yesterday. There was no mention in the communique, to be sure, of any possible Turkish declaration of war on Germany, either at this time or at any time in the future. Nor was anything said of any cession of Turkish bases to the Allies. In fact, the communique was completely silent on military matters. Nevertheless the Nazis will regard as ominous the fact that President Ismet Inonu of Turkey has been in consultation for three days with President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill. It is inconceivable that in those three days the three leaders limited their conversations to a mere exchange of compliments. Far more likely is the assumption which the Nazis must make, namely, that the Cairo parley saw a complete dovetailing of Turkish with Anglo-American-Russian war plans.

That assumption is underlined by the emphasis given in the communique to the fact that Turkey is an ally of Great Britain, that "the closest unity" exists between America, Turkey and Britain, and that Turkey's relationship to Russia is one of "firm friendship." All this adds up to the probability that a radical shift in Turkish policy has been decided upon by the Ankara government so as to bring this policy in line with the agreement attained at Teheran. The fruits of the hardening of opinion in Ankara will ultimately be revealed. But it is reasonable to suppose that they are likely to be very helpful in the execution of those "operations which will be undertaken from the east, west and south" which the Teheran declaration promised.

Tub-Thumping

Doubtless the Japanese are exceptionally cleanly. But the suggestion of a Middle Western agent of the War Relocation Authority that people of Japanese ancestry can teach 100 per cent American farmers anything whatever about personal hygiene is grossly offensive to the spirit of the Constitution, the sanctity of the American home, and the American standard of living. As Senator Ferguson of Michigan put it in his restrained and statesmanly fashion, "The people of Michigan need no stimulation from the Japanese mode of life . . . Sanitation in Michigan is good. We do not need their help on that or any other question." Avowedly there are more bathtubs in one single American county than in the entire Japanese Empire.

Other members of Congress responded to the challenge no less patriotically. Representative Dingell, also of Michigan, was moved to almost lyrical indignation. "As far as I know," he said, "the only dirt Michigan farmers have on them is the dirt of the soil after a good honest day's toil. At the end of the day they bathe and get rid of it." Senator Wheeler viewed it as "an insult to the farmers of the country, whether they are in the West, Middle West, or any other section." Ohio vied with Michigan in extolling its sanitary conveniences.

The matter had not, at first, appeared to us so grave. We had thought of it as just a silly blunder on the part of a minor field official of the War Relocation Authority who happened to be overzealous about his job of getting American citizens of Japanese extraction relocated in some place where they could be of use to our war effort. But, judging from Monday's Congressional Record, it was a blunder worse than a crime.

Time, we trust, will assuage the injury and humiliation which the farmers of Ohio and Michigan (and, as Senator Wheeler has pointed out with such vision, the farmers of the entire Nation) have suffered at the hands of the War Relocation Authority. The insult was monstrous. It was dastardly. It was even, if we may use the term, somewhat indiscreet.

SOLDIER'S LETTER

My dear one,
We have come to a strange world;
The grass thickens on the southern rim of the field.
We are gaining in our work:
We lifted the restrictions today.
This is an unfamiliar country—not like home;
The people talk in odd accents,
The nights lengthen, and there are cool winds in the darkness.
Many weeks now, and I have not heard from you.
Do you not know that in the thunder of the days
There is nothing but you?
You make real my daily hoping, and I see your form
In the strength of the hastening hours.
The nights are endless, but the dreams live through them;
The heartbeat of yourself is against me forever,
And death is an empty word when you are my life.
I endure the days for the sake of you;
And I see only black pages closing, closing one by one,
And the white, clean, happy ones coming when you shall be mine
Always, and the world that is today
Becomes a faltering dust.

Soldier Voting

By Mark Sullivan

Up To The States

ABOUT SOLDIER voting, the situation is this: The Senate has passed a bill which leaves soldier-voting wholly up to the States—which limits the Federal Government to a mere direction to the Army and Navy that they cooperate with the States, in distributing ballots and the like. This bill now goes to the House. There it goes first to the House Committee on Elections. This committee is likely to approve the Senate bill as it stands, and report it out to the House. Whether the House will make any change will be seen shortly.

Whatever change the House makes—if it makes any, which is problematic—soldier-voting will remain up to the States. For the Senate debate on the bill attempting to have the Federal Government take charge of soldier-voting, and the rejection of this in favor of leaving it to the States—showed clearly the undesirability of Federal action in any comprehensive way. That notion, in its entirety, is unlikely to be revived. After all is over, soldier-voting will be up to the States.

Even in the rejected Senate bill, empowering the Federal Government to take over, the States would still have had a part in soldier-voting. For that Senate bill did a strange thing—it gave control to the Federal Government over only some voting, not all. It gave control only over elections to Federal offices—President, Vice President, Members of Congress. It said nothing about soldier-voting for the immense number of State and local officials to be elected next year—Governors, members of the Legislature, county officers. That distinction—giving soldiers less opportunity to vote for local officials, than for Federal officials, was one of the reasons for defeat of the Senate bill.

ALL SOLDIER VOTING is now up to the States (unless a change is made in the House, which seems unlikely). It is up to the States, not merely for the sake of seeing that soldiers have opportunity to vote—but for the very life of the States. On this point there is an eloquent text in a recent address by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York: "There must be a halt to the concentration of power in the National Government." This sentiment has become widespread, not only among such as Mr. Dewey, but throughout the public. The country has seen, during recent years, the Federal Government taking more and more functions of government, the States constantly shrinking. The process has been accompanied by increased power of the Federal Government over the individual citizen. The movement has been due largely to the philosophy of those now in power at Washington—but also has been partly the fault of the States themselves. States, like other institutions and like individuals, tend to lose functions in proportion as they do not exercise those functions adequately.

Disquiet over the passing of power and functions from the States has led to the formation of a "Council of State Governments." This council comprises the Governors of the 48 States, and other State officials, secretaries of state and attorneys general. The council has increasing vitality. It meets annually and has a board of managers which meets quarterly. It maintains a permanent staff, has an office in Washington. The present head of the council is a Governor who has special concern for the American structure of government, and high ability, Gov. Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts.

IT IS NOW up to this council, and of course to State officials and State legislators, to see that the States live up to the responsibility of giving the soldiers opportunity to vote. This means changing State laws about absentee voting so as to accommodate soldiers abroad. It means extending the time permitted for absentee voting. At present, some States gives the absentee voter as little as 15 days preceding election. It means simplifying the absentee voting laws. At present, in Illinois, for example, five mailings are required: (1) The absentee voter mails a request for a blank application. (2) The blank is mailed to the absentee. (3) The application, filled out, is mailed by the absentee. (4) A ballot is mailed to the absentee. (5) The ballot is filled out by the absentee and mailed. This should be reduced, by all States, to perhaps two mailings. Two mailings should not unduly burden the transportation facilities of the Army and Navy.

For the necessary steps by the States—in sessions of legislatures soon to be held, or in special sessions where necessary—the Council of State governments has begun to act.

Property Owners

In an issue of The Post I note a very interesting statement of the many thousands of dollars saved tenants by the Rent Board. It caused me to ponder how many thousands of dollars the poor property owners had lost!

The general class of tenant now obtained is ruin to the property owner. I am one such owner, and I know several others. The way out is to sell, at whatever cost or loss, and get rid of the harrassment. This applies also to Maryland and Virginia owners.

Good-Neighbor Policy

By Sumner Welles

Outstanding Achievement

WHEN THE historian of the future assays the conduct of the foreign relations of the United States during the last decade he will appraise the good-neighbor policy as the outstanding achievement of that period.

It has resulted in the firmest regional understanding which has so far been established. It has brought about a united hemisphere.

After the attack on Pearl Harbor the people of the United States had reason to appreciate the vital importance to them of this unity of the New World. Had that unity not existed, our ability to take effective part in the war in North Africa and in the Pacific would not only have been greatly retarded, but might, at least temporarily, have been wholly impeded.

Reasons of military security have as yet made it impossible for the public to know how vast the assistance was which Brazil gave us in that early stage of our war effort, and how much our military operations in Africa depended upon that assistance.

Our power to safeguard the Panama Canal and our access to oil and bauxite resources in northern South America in those dangerous months of 1942 were largely facilitated through the supplementary endeavors of the governments of Panama, Colombia, Venezuela and the Central American republics.

The submarine menace in the Caribbean was eliminated far more rapidly because of the collaboration of Cuba, the Dominican Republic and Haiti; our supply lines to the South Pacific were secured because of the help given by Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia and Chile; and our capacity to defend our coast line in California and in the Gulf of Mexico was immeasurably enhanced by the effective military partnership offered by the government of Mexico.

Every American republic except Argentina has given its assistance in the common cause to the full measure of its ability.

IT IS tonic to remember the situation in 1917 when the United States entered the first World War and there was no good-neighbor policy.

Mexico was seething with resentment against us, and the then German government was actively negotiating for Mexican aid; United States troops were in occupation of two independent American republics and the hostility created by these acts of military intervention was bitter throughout the hemisphere; German influence was powerful in many of the regions lying near the Panama Canal, and in some of the South American countries where German agents were omnipresent, sympathy with the Central Powers was preponderant.

Had such dangers existed in 1942, when Japan and Italy were also both at war with the United States, as they were not in 1917, the situation of our country would have been precarious.

It must also now be clear to everyone in the United States who gains his livelihood from the manufacture of goods to be sold abroad that an ever-increasing market in the Western Hemisphere for our exports can only be assured through a continuation of the existing inter-American policy. We will need that market more than ever in the postwar years.

I feel it is useful to emphasize these self-evident truths because of the fact that so many people who believe in and who support the good-neighbor policy appear to take its existence for granted.

OUR INTER-AMERICAN relationships of today have not come into being, as many persons, even in Washington, seem to think, because certain high officials of our Government have occasionally made speeches replete with worthy and benign sentiments. They exist because many thousands of individuals holding positions of responsibility, both in and out of Government, in every one of the 21 American republics, have labored in very practical, concrete ways, during these last years, not only to bring them to life, but, even more, to make them grow.

They will not grow without active popular support. They require constant effort, intelligent vision and occasional sacrifices on the part of every American nation for the common good of all. Once they stop growing, they will inevitably disintegrate.

There are two sure ways of checking this growth.

The first is for the special interests and high-tariff lobbyists in the United States to succeed in their drive, already under way, to prevent this Government from assisting other American nations in tiding themselves over economic stresses resulting from war conditions, and to curtail the markets now open in the United States to our American neighbors for their exports.

The other way is for this Government to assume that other American governments are going blindly to follow the lead of the United States in postwar policy.

IT HAS been my hope that when the time came for the negotiation of peace settlements, and for the determination of international organization, the states of the Western Hemisphere would be bound together by a common policy.

I have felt that the New World, removed as it has been from the rivalries and bitterness of Europe and of the Far East, could bring to the consideration of long-range political adjustments and of permanent peace machinery, a greater objectivity than that which can be found in countries which have actually been the battlefields of this most horrible of all wars.

The influence of New World policy in the peace settlements might be of decisive value provided it represented the united will of a united hemisphere.

The time is perhaps growing short. It is more than disquieting to realize that so far there has been no consultation between this Government and the governments of the other American nations regarding these vital questions. We have been thankful to have their help in the war effort. We have as yet given them no sign that we want their help in the peace effort.

We have already entered into far-reaching political commitments at Moscow. Our American neighbors learned of these decisions solely through the press.

If we desire the collaboration of the other independent nations of the Western Hemisphere in our endeavor to create a better world we must deal with them as partners in that greatest of all enterprises. We cannot take their support for granted.

Loyalty Probes

Having, in the past, admired your paper for its commendable stand on civil liberities, your fine editorial "Loyalty Probes" prompts this note of appreciation. It is both timely and fortunate that support for the Civil Service Commission's democratizing action can come from a strong source so close to home.

This support appears especially noteworthy in view of the backhanded sniping that immediately followed the "reaffirmation of the commission's established policies." This sniping, characterized by the usual, half-truths and innuendoes of snipers, is answered by the facts of your editorial.

WILLIAM L. GREENE.
Washington, D. C. Dec. 6.

The Washington, District of Columbia, Council of the United Federal Workers of America, CIO, would like to congratulate you upon your sane editorial supporting the Civil Service Commission order which restrains investigators from asking questions concerning membership in unions and other legal organizations, or questions concerning "sympathy with Loyalist Spain," "association with Negroes," or "general queries about the social and political philosophy of an applicant, or about his race, creed or color."

Your editorial has helped to clear the air of the hysterical ravings of those who periodically see little red gremlins cavorting from desk to desk in the Government service. We wholeheartedly agree with you that the questions eliminated by the commission could shed no light whatever on the loyalty, character or qualifications of a Government employe. We take great pride in the fact that the campaign to democratize Civil Service Commission investigations has been spearheaded by the national office of our own organization. We note that you fully recognize that the questions banned by the commission could have "no effect save to . . . provide ammunition for the warped inquisitions of the Dies Committee." We should like to add that the Dies Committee has served and is serving as one of the principal sounding boards for Nazi prejudice and propaganda in the United States.

It is not accidental that the Federal Communications Commission reported Martin Dies to be the object of lavish praise and wide publicity in Nazi Germany. We would further add that the current attack upon the Civil Service Commission order and upon the National officers of UFWA, which has been launched with characteristic, but by now faded, red-scare trimmings, has as its primary objective the smearing of the Win-the-War Administration of President Roosevelt and obstructing improvements in the Federal Service. There have been persistent attempts to give the American people the false impression that the Roosevelt Administration has staffed the Government service with persons disloyal to the democratic traditions of America.

To the degree that your newspaper consistently exposes the maneuvers of those who stand for the type of "Americanism transiently put into vogue by Martin Dies," you will be making an important contribution to victory over our Fascist enemies and to a Government service free from fear and the malignant tumors of Fascist ideology.

Erratum

May I ask correction of an inaccuracy in your article headed "Disappointment," in The Post of November 8. You there quote me as saying that the city needs "many times more" public housing. What I said was that there should be "much more." The difference is that between multiplication and addition. The mistake is one easily made at the receiving end of a telephone. I was asked questions about the D'Alesandro report and my responses had to do with slum reclamation; they did not include war housing. JOHN IHLDER.

Peace Plans In Elmdale

By Malvina Lindsay

Suburban Tomorrow

ELMDALE IS a suburb of a large city. But it was long a village, and its inhabitants have known each other and each other's business for generations. Hence the ripples of life stir it as a unit.

Outwardly the war has not changed Elmdale greatly. It is a little run down around the edges, and life is increasingly inconvenient to commuters and housewives. There are no youths hanging around its drugstores, few waiting outside the churches to see the girls come out. A glaring sign, "Auction Sale," still covers the window of Benson's deserted grocery store, where the old-timers for years telephoned Mr. Benson for "nice fresh roasts." After Mr. Benson died they telephoned his sons, Tom and Floyd. Tom was drafted early in the war and soon was sending letters home from Africa. Recently Floyd was drafted. On the day he left, word came that Tom had been killed in action in Italy. In other ways war left its deeper wounds. Mrs. Meade goes on cheerfully about her church and club work, entertains her friends. Yet Marvin, her only son, was on a bomber that "failed to return" from a Berlin raid.

Though anxiety hovers constantly in many a home, Elmdale, with typical American optimism, is concerned with getting the war over so that "everything will be a lot easier." Nearly everyone there is thinking of the new and better future in terms of movement—a new car, or at least gasoline and tires for the old one. All are dreaming of the time when they will no longer be penned up at home, no longer have to lug parcels home on the streetcar or on foot, no longer have to ride to and from work in crowded streetcars and buses. One marvels at what a necessity the automobile had become in America. One wonders how such a restless people ever endured their horse and buggy era.

New Car Comes First

Among those who are going to get a new car—and without doubt a new refrigerator and radio—are the Doads. Mrs. Doad, a shiftless and not too bright wife of a day laborer, seldom, in prewar days, left the home in which her husband thought she belonged. Now she has a $30-a-week job in a war plant. She wears slacks and a cheap fur coat, has a glamour bob and a bright gob of rouge on each cheek. She goes to work at noon and her children are on the neighborhood until their father comes home. The Doads live in a temporary two-room house on stilts, such as buyers in cheap new additions put up in boom days. The neighbors were hoping the Doads would use their new riches to improve their home, but Mrs. Doad has other ideas.

Elmdale's housewives who in prewar days had maids or cleaning women now are grimly trying to stick it out until the good old days when help was plentiful return. One wonders how prewar help will respond. The McBatt girls, who used to be available for such duties, are now making $50 a week and have fur coats and men callers in automobiles.

Dottie Gimpson, who used to stay with children when Elmdale parents went out for the evening, quit high school to go into an office. She has quit jobs three times in the last year because she was given too much detail, or "wasn't getting anywhere." She now gets $35 a week. It is of course inconceivable that Dottie will be available for baby minding in the postwar world.

Steak Days Ahead

Elmdale is also thinking strongly of tomorrow in terms of food—of meat counters and restaurants abounding in choice cuts of steak, of butter ladeled out lavishly in kitchen cookery, of bridge luncheons topped with butter pecan pie a la mode. Its women are thinking of release from rayon stockings and girdles with nonelastic supporters. Its men are thinking of the spacious expanse of golf links and of finding secretaries who will again take things off their shoulders.

Nobody seems to be as excited about the postwar gadgets as one would suppose. And no one seems to be thinking very much about the social adjustments that will have to be made when Mrs. Doad and Dottie Gimpson and the McBatt girls lose their jobs and when the Doad children get bigger and wilder; or about any community projects that might ease unemployment; or about what the schools are going to do for teachers; or about how the too many competing churches might get together and provide more social life and recreation. True, the Woman's Club has an occasional lecturer on postwar planning. True, people talk about how the Nation ought to be run and the world reorganized. But Elmdale apparently has not been struck home with the realization that the rebuilding of the world will begin in its own homes.

Looking at Elmdale, serene and bright in the winter sunshine, one is thankful it has escaped the bombs and desolation of Europe. But one cannot help but wonder if it will ever be sufficiently jarred to make for itself a better tomorrow.

Teheran Declaration

By Ernest Lindley

Complete Agreement Reached

WE HAVE THE solemn word of Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin that they have reached "complete agreement" on the scope and timing of military operations against Germany, that they are "sure" their concord will result in an enduring peace, and that they parted "friends in fact, in spirit, and in purpose."

LINDLEY

These statements are fundamental. They are all that anyone could ask; and we can be sure that they would not have been said so bluntly if the principals at the Teheran conference had not believed them to be true.

The failure to issue a declaration to the German people may be disappointing to some observers. Until more is known about the deliberations of the "Big Three," no one can say whether they deemed such a declaration untimely, or whether they were unable to agree on the treatment to be accorded to the Reich. As to the details of other political arrangements in Europe, full agreement may not have been reached, and may not even have been attempted. All of the problems of the world cannot be solved at a single meeting. The United States, Britain and the Soviet Union cannot be expected to see every international matter eye-to-eye. What matters is the determination of the three nations to work as partners—to let nothing interfere with their purpose of organizing a peace which will endure, as they say, "for many generations."

The Teheran declaration, however, reiterates the intention of the "Big Three" of the European war to seek the active cooperation of all democratic nations, large or small. The supplementary declaration on the independence and sovereignty of Iran should be even more definitely reassuring to the smaller nations of Europe.

SUCCESS FOR THE Teheran meeting was foreshadowed by the Moscow agreement. In terms of geographical distance, Roosewent four-fifths of the way to see Stalin. But for Stalin, the trip to Teheran was an even more radical departure from precedent. It was his first expedition outside the Soviet Union in more than 30 years—a trip which many outside observers would have said a few years ago that neither he nor any one in his position in the Soviet Union would dare make.

In his efforts to find ground for long-time understanding with the Soviet Union, the President has been tenacious and patient. He has brushed aside, time and again, misgivings and criticisms in his own country and even in his own official family. The Russians, at least until now, have been hard to deal with—filled with suspicion themselves and often unmannerly, to say the least. But the President steadfastly has tried to break down the walls of misunderstanding between the Soviet Union and the West. In some respects, getting Stalin to leave the Soviet Union to confer with him and Churchill may be the President's greatest single achievement in that direction.

SOME LONDON commentators are quoted as saying that at Teheran Stalin won his argument for the opening of a second land front in the west. The opening of this front had been agreed upon long ago by the British-American (combined) chiefs of staff. The American chiefs of staff always favored it. They swung around to the North African expedition in 1942 only when it became clear that an invasion of Europe from the west could not be mounted in 1942 and probably not in 1943. Whether the Teheran conference modified in any way the plans already drawn up will not be known until later. Even if all preparations had been completed, the weather would still have to be reckoned with. Stalin was informed of the Anglo-American plans at the Moscow conference. After that Soviet demands for prompt action subsided, and the Teheran declaration seems to remove all ground for further doubt or criticism — assuming that no untoward event, such as a vicious German assault on Britain with new weapons, upsets the time table or forces resort to different lines of attack.

It may be significant that the communique speaks of "destroying the German armies." Heretofore, Stalin has preferred to speak of the power of "Hitlerite Germany." The wording of the Teheran declarstion reinforces the Moscow agreement on "unconditional surrender."

For further illumination, we shall have to wait. We probably won't know all about the conference until the principals write their memoirs. Other declarations will be revealed by events. It is a fair assumption that the war against Japan, and Russia's relationship to it, were discussed, whether or not any commitments were made. The central fact is that the "Big Three" met at last and that, according to their own testimony, the meeting was a success and they left determined that the nations they represent should stick together.

House Group to Open Hearings On Muster-Out Pay Bills Today

By the Associated Press

Urged by the Democratic and Republican House leadership to expedite action on mustering out pay for the armed forces, the House Military Committee announced it would start hearings on Administration-backed legislation today.

Chairman May (Democrat) of Kentucky added that he expected the House to act Friday. Previously, he had said there was little likelihood of committee action before the first of the year because of the absence of committee members.

The legislation under consideration provides for payment of $100 upon discharge to men and women who have been in uniform less than three months, $200 for those with from three to six months service, and $300 for more than six months service.

However, mustering-out pay of $300 for each member of the fighting forces and one month's additional base pay for buying civilian clothes were proposed in two House bills introduced yesterday.

Representative May introduced the mustering-out pay bill (HR-3799). It also has been proposed in the Senate by his colleague, Senator Barkley (Democrat) of Kentucky.

The extra month's base pay for civilian clothes was proposed in a bill (HR-3800) by Representative Fay (Democrat) of New York.

Rails to Get 50,000 New Freight Cars

By James F. King

Fifty thousand new freight cars, considerably more than were produced in any one year during the decade prior to Pearl Harbor, will be made available for domestic use during 1944, the War Production Board revealed yesterday.

Thirty thousand of the new cars will be made entirely of steel because of the available supply of that metal and the shortage of lumber, WPB said. It was explained that steel freight cars are much more efficient than the composite wood and steel ones which have been the only type manufactured since early 1942. The all-steel car takes less time and manpower to construct, requires less maintenance and will carry approximately 300 cubic feet more freight.

Meanwhile, in another effort to make better use of the Nation's available transportation facilities, Joseph B. Eastman, director of Defense Transportation, wrote to the presidents of 1450 chambers of commerce groups througout the country asking them to help stimulate efforts to conserve shipping space during the coming months.

Eastman told the chamber presidents that transportation as a whole would be confronted with critical conditions during the winter and spring. He said winter operating conditions, growing manpower shortages, car supply, and uncertainties facing truck transport would require intensification by shippers and carriers of conservation measures in railroad freight service. He asked for a 10 per cent improvement in over-all efficiency.

May Involve Sacrifice

In a covering letter sent to chamber presidents by Eric A. Johnston, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, the presidents were told that their help in influencing shippers in their communities to make better use of freight transportation would be "an important national service."

"Such cooperation by users of railroad freight service," Eastman wrote, "may at times involve sacrifice and expenditures but it should be borne in mind that such costs will be far less than the losses that would be incurred from incomplete transportation service."

Typical advice given shippers and receivers was: Don't order more cars than you can actually use, load and unload cars immediately, clean cars promptly so they can be used by the next shipper, make purchases as close to point of consumption as possible, cooperate with other shippers in seeing that cars are fully loaded.

Carriers were asked to switch cars into outbound cars as soon as possible, expedite repairing of cars and not to hold idle cars for prospective loads.

The Gallup Poll . . .

By George Gallup

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 7.—Claims made by farm leaders that the farmers of the country are opposed to the food subsidy program must be accepted with important reservations, a survey of farm opinion indicates.

This study finds that, first, not many farmers have followed the discussions of the subsidy issue closely enough to have a very clear idea of what subsidies are.

Second, those farmers who do know about the subsidy program are by no means universally opposed to it. The opinion of those questioned in the survey seems to be about evenly divided at present, with a slight preponderance in favor.

In conducting its study, the Institute first sought to determine just how many farmers interviewed had any sort of idea what the term "farm subsidy" might mean.

The results show that 35 per cent of those questioned—or about one-third—appeared to have some understanding of the term, including 13 per cent who indicated a fairly exact knowledge. The remainder—65 per cent—either could not define the term or gave an incorrect definition.

In short, the subsidy issue has apparently not penetrated very deeply into the thinking of the great mass of farmers up to the present, though, of course, it may do so as time goes on.

Much the same situation prevails among the non-farm population as well. Interviews with a cross-section of the urban, small-town and rural non-farm population show that only about 29 per cent seem to understand what is meant by food subsidies, while 71 per cent do not.

Farmers and others who did indicate a knowledge of subsidies were then asked in the survey to give their ideas on what Congress should do about the subsidies program.

In the case of the farm population, interviewers report that up to the present about as many farmers favor the food subsidy program as oppose it. In the case of the non-farm population, however, the division is 2 to 1 in favor of subsidies.

Capt. Willard A. Kitts of Oswego, N. Y., stationed in the Naval Bureau of Ordnance here, was nominated by President Roosevelt yesterday to be rear admiral.

Murray Criticizes Pacific Phone Co. Wage Rehearing

Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, yesterday publicly criticized the decision of the War Labor Board to rehear a wage award made last July to 540 employes of the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co. The rehearing is set for today in the boardroom of the Labor Department Building.

Murray said the order for a rehearing "sets an extremely dangerous precedent that can adversely affect the whole of the Nation's economic stabilization program.

"In this decision, which involves the American Communications Association, the board some five months ago ordered a wage raise to bring the workers up to the Little Steel formula. Now the board indicates that it is willing to consider a retreat from even this outmoded and thoroughly discredited formula at the demand of the giant telephone monopoly.

"Though the case involves only 540 workers, such a decision will be a clear sign to all employers that they can with confidence demand and secure a rehearing on every order which they regard with distaste."

Capital Transit Gets Best Rating For Maintenance

The Capital Transit Co. has maintained the highest degree of wartime maintenance efficiency of any company in the Nation operating 1000 buses or more, it was announced yesterday by the magazine, Bus Transportation, which annually makes awards for operational efficiency.

It was pointed out that Capital Transit operates one main and three divisional shops, with a total maintenance force of 331. During 1942 the company lost 11 per cent of its garage force to Selective Service and 47 per cent to war industries.

During 1942 maintenance costs rose 11 per cent over 1941 while service delays, chargeable to maintenance, went up 13 per cent, the magazine said.

Davis, Former WFA Head, Calls Farm Price Gains 'Undesirable'

Chicago, Dec. 7 (AP).—Chester C. Davis, former War Food Administrator, contended tonight that "in the interest of long-time farm welfare any further marked increase in the general level of farm prices is undesirable."

He also opposed the general use of food subsidies but maintained that those which resulted in expanded production should be continued.

Davis, in an address prepared for the convention of the American Farm Bureau Federation, stated the general level of farm prices this year was high enough to yield a cash farm income of between 19 and 20 billion dollars compared with 8.7 billions in 1939 and 11.3 billions in 1929. He added:

"Unless their production costs materially increase, farmers for their own and the general welfare should join wholeheartedly to hold their prices in check. For one thing, further increases would add to the danger of inflation in farm real estate prices that already is on the horizon."

Davis, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, said flexibility in price adjustment between commodities is needed and "is almost wholly lacking in the present OPA-WFA economic stabilization setup." He figured some prices ranged higher and others lower than they should have.

"General" Subsidies Not Needed

"I do not believe that the general use of Treasury subsidies is necessary either to keep food prices from advancing further, or to secure downward adjustment in the case of commodities when consumer prices are higher than necessary to get production and reward the producer," Davis asserted.

"Neither, on the other hand, do I believe it is a wise national policy to prohibit all use of subsidies. Whether they are used, and the extent to which they are used, should depend on their necessity from the standpoint of planned and intelligent food management."

Davis stated the division of pro-subsidy and anti-subsidy groups into "warring camps" was a tragic mistake that could have been averted by proper cooperation between executive and legislative governmental branches in developing a long-range program for the management of the U. S. food supply.

O'Neal Discusses Peace

Earlier, Edward A. O'Neal, president of the federation, told the meeting:

"I hope to see the day when representatives of farm people, elected by the people and not appointed by the Government, will get together at regular intervals to consider their mutual problems and to work them out.

"To be quite frank, I believe that the farm people of the world, working in this way, could do more to preserve world peace than could any other group or agency.

". . . If we are to maintain the peace of the world, we must encourage world trade on a fair basis. To accomplish this, it will be necessary to overhaul the tariff policies of all nations, and it will be necessary to stabilize the currency of the nations.

"When nations trade with each other they become acquainted with each other's problems. Trade makes friends. It must be apparent to everybody that reconstruction of the economies of the nations participating in the war can never be carried out successfully, unless each nation is given access to raw materials, and the right to exchange some of their surplus products for the products of other nations that they need and want."

He attacked subsidies on grounds that it would be a "herculean task" to eliminate them, and because, once the war is ended, "it would be politically easy to utilize the deflationary process as a potent argument for the continuance of subsidies."

O'Neal termed the original Agricultural Adjustment Act the "Magna Charta of agriculture" and said the reason a large section of rural opinion was now hostile to the AAA was "the agency, or at least many individuals in the agency, have gotten into politics."

King George VI Victim of Grippe Sweeping England

London, Dec. 7 (U.P.).—King George VI was a victim today of the nation-wide grippe epidemic and will be confined for several days. His illness was not considered serious, but his doctors recommended that he stay in as a precautionary measure.

The Duchess of Kent, the King's sister-in-law, also is suffering from a cold.

A dispatch from Zurich said today a serious epidemic of the grippe also is sweeping Berlin as a result of the RAF raids and unheatable dwellings.

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Cairo (via London), Dec. 7.—Twenty-six bottles of Scotch whisky, 12 bottles of French champaign of 1928 vintage, 9 bottles of chablis, 2 bottles of claret, 3 bottles of 1864 French brandy and an unspecified quantity of sherry, were drunk in Jerusalem in one day by British and American military chiefs and the party accompanying them on their return from Teheran. The party numbered 43.

Drinks were consumed from luncheon until late at night, and between meals. Military experts visited the Holy Sepulchre, via Dolorosa, Wailing Wall and Omar's Mosque. British taxpayers will presumably pay for the drinks. All the liquor came from the British hospitality fund and was brought on the warship that transported Churchill.

The juke-box that sees smoke and yells "fire!"

An electric eye is cocked against fire on America's big cargo ships. The instant a wisp of smoke appears, the "eye" spots it and sounds an alarm. This juke-box-like Rich-Audio cabinet even tells where the fire's coming from! This is a Kidde job.

Bottling the breath of life! Oxygen tanks for flyers must be re-charged. Kidde compressors deliver surgically clean oxygen anywhere on the globe!

Gas attack on "gas" fires! On airfield crash trucks, asbestos-clad men carry Kidde extinguishers that smother gasoline fires with carbon dioxide gas.

Fast in fighting subs—or fires! Chasing subs leaves no time for fire-fighting. So PT's simply blast it out with Kidde carbon dioxide gas.

Walter Kidde & Company are marketers of ingenious devices for putting the discoveries of modern science to work. Harnessing gases-under-pressure is one example. War products now confidential promise peacetime applications. Other completely new products are on our drawing boards.

National Bank Assets Mount To 66 Billion

Total assets of 5058 national banks on October 18 amounted to $66,156,984,000, compared with $58,972,352,000 in 5,066 banks on June 30, Preston Delano, Comptroller of the Currency, reported yesterday.

The gain was $7,184,632,000 for the period and $11,376,006,000 over the assets in 5087 national banks December 31, 1942.

Investments in United States Government obligations, direct and guaranteed, of $35,709,814,000 showed an increase of $5,519,412,000, or more than 18 per cent since June 30, 1943.

Surplus of $1,511,000,000, undivided profits of $636,000,000 and reserves of $275,000,000—a total of $2,422,000,000—increased $95,000,000 over June and $187,000,000 over December, 1942.

The percentage of loans and discounts to total deposits on October 18, 1943, was 17.44 4per cent in comparison with 16.78 per cent on June 30, 1943, and 20.14 on December 31, 1942.

Liberal to Former Employes

Directors of the Gulf Oil Corporation yesterday extended the company's financial assistance plan to employes in military service and their dependents to July 1, 1944, from January 1, next.

President J. Frank Drake said the plan supplements the employe's military pay during the first three months he is in service and thereafter gives assistance to certain dependents, as well as aiding him in carrying life insurance.

Postwar Demand Surveyed

The first thing that most Americans want to buy after the war is an automobile, Fortune magazine reported yesterday on the basis of a survey.

Twenty-one per cent of the persons questioned named "a car" as the No. 1 item on their post-war shopping list, and if this percentage applied through all the families in the Nation it would mean 7,400,000 orders, the magazine said.

That compares with average peacetime purchases of 2,500,000 to three million automobiles a year.

New homes and house repairs rank second in specific postwar wants, the survey shows, while mechanical refrigerators, washing machines, stoves, rugs, radios, phonograph combinations, air conditioning, clothes, farm machinery, airplanes and a business of some kind rank next in that order on the list of things to be purchased.

Considering only the demand for the first 12 specific articles the survey indicates a market for 28 billion dollars worth of goods.

Furniture Trend Reversed

Normal business trends in the furniture industry were reversed during October, Seidman & Seidman, accountants for the furniture industry, said yesterday in their monthly report.

Orders accepted last month were 8 per cent greater than in September and shipments were down 7 per cent, the report stated. October ordinarily is the best month for shipping, while orders usually show a decline.

Compared with October, 1942, orders were off some 58 per cent, shipments, 23 per cent; dollar payrolls, 22 per cent, and employment, 16 per cent.

Noted Actress to Star In Her Own First Play At National Week Dec. 27

RUTH GORDON, as star of "Over Twenty-One," the new comedy of her own authorship, will be presented by Producer Max Gordon as the post-Christmas attraction at the National Theater the week of Monday, December 27.

RUTH GORDON

Although this distinguished actress has scored many tremendous personal successes in such widely varied plays as "A Doll's House," "Saturday's Children," "Ethan Frome" and most recently with Katharine Cornell in her all-star production of Chekhov's "The Three Sisters," this is her first adventure as a dramatist. Her first work is being given the benefit of direction by George S. Kaufman.

Mr. Gordon's record of successive comedy hits these past few seasons—"My Sister Eileen," "Junior Miss," "The Doughgirls"—augurs well for Miss Gordon's maiden effort. So does the supporting cast, which will include Harvey Stephens, Jack Durant, Jessie Busley, Dennis Moore, Kay Aldridge and numerous others of note.

Settings by Raymond Sovey, Miss Gordon's gowns by Mainbocher, if that is what you've been waiting for, to round it out.

Tonight brings the second chapter in the season of America's dramatic heritage, to which the Speech and Drama Department of Catholic University is dedicating its seventh year of active production. Perpetuating the comic vein established by "The Contrast," the bill opening tonight will be "Rip Van Winkle," involving the ministrations of two talented Kerrs. One of the earliest acting versions of the legend of the Catskills was by John Kerr; in the C. U. treatment, much of Walter Kerr's material has been incorporated, notably his widely-known Dwarf scene. The title role will be played by Dick Sikes, with Sally Moorman as his shrewish wife, Gretchen. Others in the cast will embrace Vincent Walsh and Louise Walsh—the one from Scranton, Pa., the other from Kansas City, Mo. Ralph Brown, as usual, has contrived atmospheric settings that will add greatly to the quaintness and charm of the play immortalized by the late Joseph Jefferson and inherited by his sons.

The Line of March

Next week, by the way, will be considerably more prolific in new entertainment than last. Tomorrow, Loew's Palace will be breaking out the much-discussed "Guadalcanal Diary," picturized from the Tregaskis book, and the Capitol, "Happy Land," from the story by MacKinley Kantor. At RKO-Keith's the new screen feature will be Olsen and Johnson's ideally named "Crazy House," with the famous team as two of its principal inmates. Friday, at the Earle, will usher in "In Old Oklahoma," costarring John Wayne and Martha Scott, a volcanic item being previewed this morning. "Girl Crazy," the Rooney-Garland costarrer, goes into the Columbia tomorrow and "Old Acquaintance," with Bette Davis and Miriam Hopkins, to the Metropolitan next day. Come Sunday, the Boston Comic Opera Company will be inaugurating its two weeks of Gilbert and Sullivan repertoire at the National. So that's the crop, and quite a crop it is, too.

Speaking of previews, yesterday morning's was about as nerve-wracking and gory as one is apt to come across. First to be unspooled for the drama desks was the March of Time's new "Naval Log of Victory," beginning with Pearl Harbor—it was designed to honor the second anniversary of that infamous debacle—and bringing the global war on the high seas down to date. Then came "The Cross of Lorraine." The implication of the title flows vaguely along the line that might be suggested by "Joan of Arc," but what "The Cross of Lorraine" really is, is a vivid and at times brutal resume of the story of fallen France and the underground's heroic struggle against the Nazis. Much of it has been derived from Hans Habe's "A Thousand Shall Fall." A few of the characters, it seemed to me, betrayed a slightly twisted psychology, but, by and large, it is a forceful and illuminating picture—as you will learn at the Capitol the week of December 16.

Film Houses Cooperate Again

The War Activities Committee of the picture industry in the District, in cooperation with the United States Navy, this week will embark on a joint campaign for new recruits for the WAVES.

Spearheading the drive will be the exhibition of an official Navy short subject, "Chief Neely Reports to the Nation," which will be shown simultaneously in thousands of picture houses throughout the country. In conjunction with the first local showings of this informative film, the local downtown theaters will set up WAVE information booths to aid in the recruiting drive.

This new activity will be inaugurated with the opening of the new bills on Thursday and Friday.

In the meantime, one assumes that "Jeannie" will barge right along, steadily creeping up on the long-run record at the Little theater. It deserves to.

Actor's Wife In Screen Debut

Hollywood.—While Dan Dailey, jr. is at the front, serving as a cavalry lieutenant, his pretty wife, Elizabeth Dailey, former Powers model, will carry on before the camera and microphone. She has been placed under contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, her husband's studio, and will make her screen debut in "Meet Me in St. Louis."

The Daileys were married last Christmas. While Lieutenant Dailey was stationed in New York his wife posed as a Powers model there.

Gossip From Gotham

New York, Dec. 7.—The Bulova radio stations may have a change of ownership soon. The chain consists of two stations in New York and one each in Boston, Hartford and New Haven. . . . Among the protests Judge Proskauer received when he withdrew his group from the American Jewish Conference, was one from Gov. Tom Dewey. . . . Newspaper publishers who wish to visit the fronts will not be permitted to go any place except England. . . . Westbrook Pegler, Mrs. Pegler and their maid all were victims of virus pneumonia. . . . The Navy has imposed a two-week censorship restriction on all the passengers who returned from Japan on the Gripsholm.

GRETA GARBO

Thursday afternoon six people met for lunch at the Pavilion—Dr. and Mrs. Serge Voronoff, Maurice Maeterlinck and Countess Maeterlinck, Greta Garbo and Dr. Gaylord Hauser. There was no one common language for the six notables. And this is how they conducted their conversation: Voronoff, the gland doctor, spoke in French; Hauser, the dietitian, spoke in French and English; Garbo spoke in English and German; Mrs. Voronoff spoke in German and French, and the Maeterlincks spoke in French.

Dr. Thomas B. Dunn, who arrived on the Gripsholm, refused to answer phone calls at his home the day after he came home. "I'm sorry," his wife told callers, "but he hasn't had a bath for four months and refuses to get out of the bathtub" . . . Orson and Rita Hayworth Welles may do a radio series here with Jimmy Durante. They auditioned last week.

Bill Slocum, director of Special Events for CBS, was lecturing on radio before a study class at the New York Institute for the Blind last week. Before the end of the lecture the blackout siren was heard. Slocum continued his address. . . . One student then suggested that they adjourn to another room where the lecturer could inspect their work. . . . "I couldn't find my way. There's a blackout on," said Slocum. . . . "Don't worry," the sightless students laughed. 'We'll lead you there."

The January issue of Cosmopolitan features a poem about children at Christmas, written by Stephen Vincent Benet just before his death. The magazine's art director felt that the poem should be illustrated by a child. The illustrations, therefore, were made by the director's 8-year-old daughter, Valerie Witalis . . . Mayor LaGuardia told a group of radio executives last week: "The microphone has ruined more politicians than liquor or women ever did" . . . The Netherlands News tells of the Nazi waiting for a train at a Dutch station. He left to wash his hands, and when he returned he found his bag gone. The Dutch worker to whom he complained replied: "In Cologne I left my bag at the station, to wash my hands. When I returned, the station was gone."

"Carmen Jones," which received such ecstatic reviews from the critics, cost Billy Rose $200,000. His advance ticket-sale is more than that. Rose owns 100 per cent of the show . . . At the premiere, Luba Malina sat in a box-seat. She sat, almost transfixed, on the edge of her seat—so someone stole her $4500 mink coat from the back of the seat . . . Baranova, the ballet star, has been signed for the new Bolton-Davis musical, "Follow the Girls" . . . Alexander King is well known along Broadway as a leading "play doctor." One of his important collaborations was his work with Clare Luce in "Margin For Error." King is renowned as a man of matchless determination.

Some years ago, a play in which he had great faith was spurned by a dozen Manhattan producers. He thereupon rented a theater for one evening, and gave a solo reading of the script, to an overflow audience, at $3.30 per ticket.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The next order of business for Judge Landis will probably be action against the clubowners' habit of paying their athletes on a bonus basis. The judge is a stickler for basic pay and frowns on bonus arrangements as dangerous to the complete integrity of the game.

POVICH

At the recent hearing of William D. Cox, ousted president of the Phillies, Landis scowled noticeably when it was testified that Cox had sent a telegram to Manager Freddie Fitzsimmons reading: "Barrett has only 16 2-3 innings to go." It was testified that Barrett had a bonus arrangement whereby he would be paid $1500 additional by the Phillies if he pitched 200 innings, and Cox was pictured as reminding Fitzsimmons that Barrett was now to be used sparingly.

The judge didn't like it; that was obvious. He has been agin' bonus contracts for a long time, and has been demanding that the owners guarantee their players sufficient pay for the season to make bonuses unnecessary. Bonuses can invite, too, many evils, Landis feels, and have no place in baseball.

Here's a hypothetical case: A pitcher is signed on an agreement he will be paid $1000 extra if he wins as many as 15 games. He has won 14, and with the pennant already decided he is pitching a meaningless game. He has friends on the opposing club who knows the victory is worth $1000 more to him. Maybe he'll shell out a part of it. Or they don't bear down as a favor to a friend. See?

Landis has tried to stamp out bonus contracts before. He now has it on a basis where there can be no bonus agreements based on a player's batting average, or pitching record or participation in a certain number of innings. The only bonus clauses he now approves are agreements based on a club's attendance figures for the season. Bonuses predicted on where a team finishes in the league standings are also out.

Landis demands that all bonus clauses be written into the contracts for his approval or rejection, but he finds it difficult to control verbal agreements. Many of the Phillies worked on verbal agreements in addition to their contracts last season. When Bucky Harris was fired, many of the players asked his help to get their verbal agreements put into writing. It was a useless effort. They wouldn't stand up with Landis anyway.

Ever since he came into baseball in 1921, Landis has been the best friend the ball players have had. He recognized immediately that one of the roots of the 1919 Black Sox scandal was the low pay of the Chicago players which left them vulnerable to the temptations of gamblers who finally fixed the World Series. Landis pointed out to the club owners the wisdom of better salaries.

Until he came along, the ball players were at the mercy of the club owners in salary matters. Now they are protected by Landis. In the same manner that club owners can come to him to protect their property rights, the ball players can take their salary arguments to Landis as a final court of appeal. The ball players pay no part of Landis' $75,000 salary, but he is their court of equity.

A few years ago, Landis cracked down on the rich owner of the Detroit club. Suffused with admiration for the way his team played in a series against the Yankees in New York, the Detroit owner sent the entire squad to a fashionable New York tailor and made them gifts of suits of clothes costing $100 per copy. It was a nice thing to do, but Landis didn't like it.

That stuff doesn't go in baseball, Landis ruled. Ball players can't be offered extra inducements by the club owners. The players are supposed to give to the limit of their ability for their regular salaries, not to be spurred by extra honorariums. That would put a premium on playing with the richer clubs. The poorer clubowner, without the wherewithal to make gifts to his players, would be under an unfair handicap, Landis ruled.

Landis makes no rule, however, against a club owner making gifts to his players at the end of the season as long as they are not in the form of special inducements during the season. He attempts no control over an owner's generosity at that point. It's special inducements that he's agin',

Most of the evils, though, originate with the club owners who attempt to take the easy way out by adopting a low standard pay and making the athletes work for their bonuses. The club owners who like the bonus arrangements want to take none of the risks of having a poor season at the gate. In effect, they make a partner of the player at a ridiculously low percentage of the profits, if any.

Landis has never been in a better spot to crack down on the club owners. He is more firmly entrenched in his job than ever as a result of his crackdown on Cox and the squelching of the big minors' revolt against his rule. He knows when he is riding high. Any day now, he can be expected to tell the owners that all types of bonus contracts are out, and make it stick. His own contract reads that he shall be the judge as to what is prejudicial to the best interests of baseball.

Two Notre Dame Players on All-America

Team Shows Strength Of Midwest Colleges

By Orlo Robertson

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—For the second time in three years, two men from one school were selected on the college All-America football team—a team that reflects the concentration of strength in the Midwest in a year in which institutions permitted to use Navy and Marine trainees dominated the gridiron show.

Notre Dame, heralded by many as the greatest of all the great teams turned out at South Bend, landed its brilliant halfback, Creighton Miller, and its outstanding tackle, Jim White, on the first eleven chosen for the nineteenth time by the Associated Press and released today after a Nation-wide survey of expert opinion. Minnesota was so honored in 1941 when Bruce Smith and Dick Wildung made the team.

With the Irish also placing two men, Quarterback Angelo (Sling-Shot) Bertelli and Guard Pat Filley, on the second eleven, the Midwest was awarded 12 of the 33 places on the All-America squad. The East where the United States military and naval academies ruled the roost, gained eight positions (three of them on the first team); the South, six; the Far West, four; the Southwest, two, and the Rocky Mountain area, one.

Odell Selected

Rounding out the All-America backfield with Miller are Otto Graham, Northwestern's greatest back since the days of Pug Rentner in 1932; Bob Odell, Pennsylvania's defensive and broken-field ace, and Bill Daley, a transfer from Minnesota who sparked the once-beaten Michigan through its first six games.

Named to the ends are Joe Parker, 6-foot 1-inch 200-pounder from Texas, and Ralph Heywood, Marine Reserve from Southern California who tips the scales at 195 pounds and stands 6 feet 2 inches.

White's running mate at tackle is Pat Preston of Duke, who at 205 pounds weighs only 3 less than the Notre Dame lineman and gives the All-America plenty of heft and speed at the two key spots. The guard positions are held down by George Brown, jr., 193-pound stalwart of the U. S. Naval Academy line, and John Steber of Georgia Tech, a 200-pound transfer from Vanderbilt. The center is Casimir Myslinski, selected by his coach, Lieut. Col. Earl Blaik, as the outstanding man on a good Army eleven at West Point.

Servicemen Stand Out

Except for Miller, who received a medical discharge from the Army, and Myslinski, a cadet at the Military Academy, all of the first eleven either are Navy or Marine men. Daley, Parker, Heywood and Preston played only the first part of the season before being transferred for advanced military training but they earned their honors over other outstanding players who were on hand for the entire campaign.

Although many schools were forced to abandon football, largely because the Army refused to permit its trainees to participate in intercollegiate athletics, there was no dearth of playing talent.

In earning the four spots in the backfield, Daley, Graham, Odell and Miller had to compete against such high-ranking performers as Bertelli; Eddie Prokop of Georgia Tech and Alvin Dark of Southwestern Louisiana, rated the two best backs in the South; Tony Butkovich of Purdue, who smashed all Big Ten scoring records although transferred before the season was completed; Johnny Podesto, driving force behind Alonzo Stagg's College of Pacific outfit; Bob Hoernschemeyer of Indiana; Bob Steuber, a Missouri transfer who made little DePauw a power-house, and at least a half-dozen others.

The Bertelli Question

Bertelli, especially, was given strong consideration for the first team. Before being transferred to the Marine base at Parris Island he gave an outstanding performance each week of running Notre Dame's "T" machine and "Dead-eye Dick" passing. When he stepped out, however, 18-year-old Johnny Lujack filled his shoes so well that there was no apparent difference in Notre Dame's showing, indicating that Frank Leahy had a great club with or without Bertelli.

Miller probably was the outstanding man in the Notre Dame backfield and many were the experts who classed him as the best runner of the year. His elusiveness, after taking advantage of the quick-opening plays for which the Irish were famous, was a thing to behold. Daley also is another speed boy. Although weighing 206 pounds he runs the century in 10 seconds flat. In six games for Michigan he gained 817 yards, averaging 6.8 yards each time he carried the ball. Against Notre Dame, the only game lost by Michigan, the Wolverine picked up 135 yards in 24 tries. The latter stands as a record for a single man against the Iris hthis season.

In Odell, Pennsylvania had the foremost defensive back of the country. He also was a top runner and a fair passer and kicker. Critics credit him with making a fair Penn team good.

Graham was the chief reason why Northwestern enjoyed its best season in recent years, losing only to Michigan and Notre Dame. The Waukegan, Ill., 190-pounder was a power both on the offense and defense. He completed 32 out of 63 aerials for 491 yards to set up a new conference record for three years of competition. For the season he scored 10 touchdowns and equaled Tommy Harmon's Big Ten mark by counting four times against Wisconsin.

Myslinski's chief opposition for the center spot came from Bill Grey, the All-Pacific Coast Conference center. While his chief forte was defensive play, the cadet from Steubenville, Ohio, also was a power on the offensive along with Merritt, named to tackle on the second team.

Parker Top Punter, Too

White and Preston, a Wake Forest transfer, stood out above a host of great tackles. The Notre Dame lineman used his speed to such an advantage that he was given much of the credit for making Notre Dame's "T" formation click. Preston led the interference for a number of touchdown plays, blocked several punts (at least two of which were converted into touchdowns) and was a bearcat on defense.

In Parker, the All-America presents an end who lettered three years on the Texas varsity and this season played 231 minutes in six games before entering the Texas Medical School at Galveston. Big and strong, he manhandled interference in a fashion that caused old-timers to rate him one of the greatest ends in Southwest history. Heywood, in addition to being a great pass catcher, also was top punter, dropped back frequently to pass and made Southern California's ends-around plays click consistently.

Army-Bound Blozis to Play Against 'Skins

North Bergen, N. J., Dec. 7 (AP). Al Bozis, towering tackle for the New York football Giants, was Army-bound tonight, but before reporting on December 29 he will have time to handle some important football assignments.

BLOZIS

Blozis was accepted at the Newark induction station, where he was measured at 6 feet 6¼ inches tall, a quarter of an inch over the limit.

Both the Navy and Coast Guard turned down the pro grid star's request to get into those services, but the Army accepted him immediately.

The Giants' 253-pound lineman said he would play Sunday when the Giants meet the Redskins at Washington in the game vital to the New York club's chances of a playoff berth. And if the Giants win, Blozis will still have time to squeeze in the playoff game.

Blozie was a shot-put record-breaker and grid star at Georgetown University before entering pro football. He is unmarried.

Quinn Hearing On Race Fixing Is Postponed

Baltimore, Dec 7 (AP).—When the State's principal witness failed to appear because of illness, the Maryland Racing Commission today postponed until Friday a hearing for Jockey Matthew Quinn.

Quinn was suspended by the stewards at Marlboro on the final day of the meeting, November 27, after Jockey Joseph Pannell charged to Commissioner George P. Mahoney that Quinn tried to bribe him to hold back his horse in the first race.

Pannell's mount, White Sea, won the race.

Pannell was to have testified at the hearing scheduled today, but he telephoned Mahoney from Charles Town, W. Va., where he has been riding, that he was ill and could not attend. The commission then delayed the hearing until Friday morning.

The hearing has been postponed once previously, having originally been set for last week, but delayed because the commission was unable to locate Quinn. He appeared today, however, with his attorney, E. Milton Altfeld.

Jackie Graves Matched With Augie La Para

New Orleans, Dec. 7 (AP).—Chairman Hugh Jones of the St. Mary's C. Y. O. Boxing Committee, said today that featherweights Jackie Graves of Austin, Minn., and Augie La Para, New Orleans boy, have been rematched for a five round bout here December 15.

A Busy Man This Week

Dr. Wilbur Bohm Holds Fate Of 'Skins in His Tape Roll

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The Redskin fans are looking to Coach Dutch Bergman and Sammy Baugh to pull the team out of its two-game slump and salt away the Eastern Division Championship Sunday against the New York Giants, but in turn the coach, the star passer and the team members are looking to Dr. Wilbur Bohm, the big fellow with the whispery voice, to see what he has to say.

Dr. Bohm, one of the Nation's authorities on athletic injuries, is the key man in the Redskin organization this week. He opens the dressing room at Griffith Stadium early in the morning and holds open house all day, before and after practice, treating the battered 'Skins who have slowed up to the extent they've taken two straight drubbings.

"Doc" is a past master at wrapping and taping. The wads of gauze, pads and cotton wrapped around Lou Rymkus, Willie Wilkin and Joe Pasqua, Sunday, and still left them free to move, attracted the individual attention of every team member. The fact that several of the 'Skins have only missed parts of games instead of the entire season is a tribute to his deft work.

Cougar Trainer 17 Years

For 17 years Washington State athletes were in the hands of Doc Bohm, including Turk Edwards, Dick Farman and Frank Akins of the present Redskins and Mel Hein of the New York Giants.

Called to his Edwardsville, Ill., home at the death of his father in September, Dr. Bohm was notified four days later the Cougars had dropped all athletics in a surprise move but that he could return to the physical education staff. About the same time the 'Skins first trainer of the present season, Red Johnson, was called to the service and Turk Edwards immediately queried his good friend of many years as to whether he would take the job. He did.

The Redskins needed no references when it came to hiring Dr. Bohm. The National Athletic Trainers Association recognizes him as their president and editor of their journal. He has been featured in two movie shorts on the treatment of athletic injuries.

And He Wrote a Book

Dr. Bohm's daily mail usually includes several orders from servicemen for a copy of his book published three years ago on "Research and Writing on Training, Conditioning and Treatment of Athletic Injuries and Corrective Work."

He was on the training staff of the 1936 Olympic games team in

Thoroughbred Group Elects New Directors

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—Eugene Mori of New Jersey's Garden State Park and Maj. Louie A. Beard of Keeneland, Lexington, Ky., were elected to the board of directors of the Thoroughbred Racing Association today, increasing the board membership to nine. Directors re-elected were John C. Clark, Hialeah Park; Harry A. Parr 3d, Pimlico; James E. Dooley, Narragansett Park; George M. Francis, Belmont Park; Col. Matt J. Winn, Churchill Downs; Carlton F. Burke, Santa Anita and Benjamin F. Lindheimer, Arlington and Washington Parks.

Wilbur Moore Definitely Out Of Giant Game

Wilbur Moore returned to Washington yesterday, but not to the Redskins. The 'Skins' great halfback was taken to Doctors Hospital with a blood clot in his leg and he is definitely out of Sunday's game with the New York Giants which the Redskins must win or tie to clinch the Eastern Division title.

Moore was helped from the playing field in the second half of the Redskins-Giant game in the Polo Grounds last Sunday and remained in New York until Monday night at the advice of physician.

No player in the National Football League puts more into a ball game than Moore, and the pounding he has been taking all season has finally floored him for at least a week. His tackles are clean but hard. He blocks, he is a pass receiver, ball carrier and one of the league's great defensive backs.

Frank Seno, the rookie from George Washington University who is a threat every time he gets his hands on the ball offensively but is woefully weak on defense, will take Moore's place in the starting line-up against the Giants. Coach Dutch Bergman may use Andy Farkas and Bob Seymour in the backfield at the same time while Seno is out. Like Seno, Farkas is weak defensively. Seno came up with a leg bruise against the Giants but should be in top shape in a day or two.

Bergman excused all the injured regulars from practice yesterday and only 14 players worked out in the morning, most of them second-stringers who have played only a few minutes all season.

Illinois Five Wins

Champaign, Ill., Dec. 7 (AP).—Employing a fast-breaking offensive which rolled up a 31 to 8 halftime lead, Illinois opened its intercollegiate basketball season tonight with a 56 to 25 victory over the University of Detroit.

Pastor Matched For Bout With Gunnar Barlund

Denver, Dec. 7 (AP).—After a year and a half layoff, Bob Pastor, who twice gave Joe Louis a stirring fight for the heavyweight crown, will meet the rugged Finn, Gunnar Barlund, in a 10-rounder in Denver, December 17. Army approval for Pastor's participation was disclosed today.

Pastor, a physical instructor at nearby Fort Logan, was ranked among the top three by the National Boxing Association as a leading contender for the heavyweight title before he entered the service. He was sent to Camp Hale, Colo., last April and has since been transferred to Fort Logan.

Barlund knocked out Lindy Elliot in Milwaukee last Friday night.

Proceeds of the bout will go to Army Air Forces. It will be the first contest sponsored by the newly organized Denver Sports Association.

Carpenter Buys Wilmington Club

Philadelphia, Dec. 7 (AP).—Robert M. Carpenter, jr., new president of the Philadelphia Phillies of the National League, announced today completion of arrangements to purchase Connie Mack's half interest in the Wilmington (Del.) Club of the Interstate League.

The purchase price was not disclosed.

Carpenter and his father, R. M. Carpenter, sr., majority stockholder in the Phillies, already own half of the stock of the Wilmington Club, which operated last season as a farm for the Philadelphia Athletics.

D. C. Police Watch Redskins After Player Gaming Rumors

I have in my players."

Major Kelly told The Post last night that "Marshall came to me saying he had heard reports that his players were visiting night spots and fraternizing with gamblers and wanted to know if this were true. He requested me to have my policemen and detectives keep an eye on Redskin players to determine if they were in the company of gamblers.

"None of my men have since reported to me that the Redskins have been frequenting gambling houses or liquor bars," Major Kelley added.

From his Chicago office, Commissioner Layden said he was coming to Washington to attend the Redskins-Giants game on Sunday but denied his trip had any connection with an investigation into reports of betting by players.

"My office is always making investigations," said Layden, "but that is routine. I am not making inquiry into reports that the Redskins are betting because my office has not been advised of such reports."

Layden issued the following announcement last night:

"Since I have become commissioner in 1940, I have investigated all rumors pertaining to irregularities in the sport with more zeal and thoroughness than anyone else connected with professional football. That is my job.

"So far I have not been able to find the slightest bit of factual evidence of collusion between anyone in the league and gamblers. Anyone can submit factual evidence. The penalty for betting is expulsion from the league, and it will be enforced swiftly and vigorously."

Rumors of betting coups and "killings" by Washington gamblers on the Redskins have been current in Washington since the game of October 24, when the Redskins barely beat out the Chicago Cardinals, 13 to 7, after beating the strong Green Bay Packers the week before, 33 to 7.

Four of the next six games played by the Redskins went down in the records as "upsets." The Redskins went into the game with the Chicago Bears as distinct underdogs and won, 21 to 7. They were heavily favored to beat Philadelphia and were tied, 14-14. In a second game with Philadelphia, when the Redskins were also favorites, they were beaten, 27-14. Last week, the New York Giants, underdogs in the betting, defeated the Redskins, 10-7.

Redskin Coach Arthur J. Bergman suggested that reports of betting by the Redskins have been originated by gamblers. "The gamblers have been taking a beating and apparently have put this story out. There has never been any sign or indication that any Redskin player has anything on his mind except football and has not been giving his best at all times."

Costatino Beaten

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—Frankie Rubino won a 10-round decision over Lulu Costatino at the Broadway Arena tonight. There was no knockdowns. Both New Yorkers weighed 131¾ pounds.

Pittsburgh Close Winner at Charles Town

Patsy Grant's Strong Ride Nets Victory

By Walter Haight

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 7.—Jockey Patsy Grant put up a strong ride aboard Mrs. J. H. Elliott's Pittsburgh to win the sixth race, best offering on the Tuesday program. Pittsburgh barely lasted, however, ahead of C. Hadaway's Market Place.

The latter was four lengths in front of J. K. Fockler's Zac Pam in the field of eight going about seven furlongs. The winner was clocked in 1:26 3/5 for the route and with J. T. Sadler's Primarily installed an odds-on favorite, Pittsburgh paid a $7.60 mutuel. The track was fast and a crowd of 3500 saw the day's action conducted under smiling skies.

Zam Pac Shows Effort

Grant took Pittsburgh to the front at once, shook off early challenges from Market Place but had to resort to the whip when the latter rallied in the final 70 yards. Zac Pam, under Jockey Danny Scocca, showed a good effort after being shut off leaving the gate. Zac Pam took the overland route and closed with excellent energy.

In the best distance race of the day, Scocca brought Mrs. Frank White's Cruiser home a neck in advance of Mrs. C. D. Toothman's Guerilla, with J. P. Harris' Busy Man third. Cruiser and Guerilla raced head and head most of the way with the son of Case Ace hanging on under strong handling. Cruiser paid $5.60.

Shortest Mutuel Price

The shortest winning mutuel price in the history of the track was paid after the third event, Dr. H. B. Langdon's Cornelia Jane was the winner and returned $2.20 to win, $2.40 to place and $2.20 to show. Jockey Carson Kirk was in the saddle.

Short-priced horses won the key races to pay a $13 daily double. Bart o' War took the first and Heel Dust won the second.

Notes—There will be an auction sale of horses in training here Saturday morning. C. M. Feltner will conduct the sale. Happy Gordon, outrider around Maryland tracks for more than 20 years, works in the mutuel department here . . . The James Sager Purse will be run tomorrow and the Washington sportsman will entertain a party in the clubhouse . . . F. B. Webb bought Good Conduct from J. S. Espito. Al Taylor is here trying to round up some horses for Cuba's winter meeting . . . Former Jockey H. Edwards was a visitor. He is private first class in our Army . . . Eddie Fitzpatrick, who works on the photo-finish camera here, hopes to get a job and make Washington his home . . . If the track stays fast, look for a new track record for 4½ furlongs tomorrow. Roman Boy tackles Try Flying, Milk Chocolate, Mars d'Esprit, Dividend and others . . . Jockey Carson Kirk has his choice of Roman Boy and Mars d'Esprit and probably will ride the former.

Touchdowners Host to Bainbridge Boys

Blair Checks Rally, Edges Little Hoyas

Montgomery Blair High School checked a late rally by Georgetown Prep basketball team yesterday to take its opening game, 23-20. Blair led 16-10 at the half, but the Little Hoyas came back and threatened in the closing quarter.

Forward Je Schrider was top scorer for the winners, with 8 points. Harrell had 7 for the Hoyas. Bill Padden and John O'Conner were outstanding in the floor play for Montgomery Blair.

Bohm Holds Fate of 'Skins In Tape Rolls

Berlin. He is a member of the National Intercollegiate Track Coaches Association, and after talking to the good doctor for a while the fact leaks out that track is his favorite sport.

Bohm received his degree in physical education at Springfield, Mass., College and his B. S. and Masters at Kirksville, Mo., College where he played on the football team and tossed the shot, discus and hammer.

He's Great Sports Fan

Doc is as great a sports fan as you will ever run across. He has made a hobby of collecting autographed pictures of sports personalities, only ones he knew personally, however, and he has nearly 500. He helped most of these in his work as trainer.

His home is only 20 miles from St. Louis and he's a nut on baseball. One of those fellows who can remember names and batting averages from years back.

Doc has made a lifelong study of athletic injuries and he can handle most of them. The back injury to Dick Farman is the only one which stumped him on the Redskins this season. He has sent questionnaires to pro football, college basketball and track coaches for opinions on training and treatment of various injuries, and the poll helped him in writing his book.

Asked whether he was going to return to Washington State when the school resumed competitive athletics, or remain with the Redskins, Doc wouldn't say. But he'll be content anywhere provided he's around fellows who can kick or pass, or run or hit a homer or throw a discus or sink a foul. Just so he can smell the linament.

Indiana Five Scores

Crawfordsville, Ind., Dec. 7 (AP). Indiana University's basketball team came from behind in the last half tonight to hand Wabash College its first defeat of the season, 38 to 35. It was the second victory in three starts for the Hooslers. Wabash now has the same record.

Macricostas Faces Leone Here Tonight

Michele Leone, who dropped a hard-fought match last month to George Macricostas, the Golden Greek, will seek revenge in their return bout tonight at Turner's Arena.

Leone and Macricostas will clash in a finish affair, sharing the spotlight with the Yellow Mask and Tom Mahoney.

These grapplers will be battling for the right to face either Yvon Robert or Jimmy Londos in a title match this month.

Frank Brunowicz faces Cliff Olson in the semiwindup.

Billy Bartush, the Blue Streak, will oppose Henry Piers and Jimmy Britt will tackle Chief Bamba Tabu, first match going on at 8:45.

Menendez Plans Double Windup Arena Fight Card

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez, greatly encouraged by the recent Oma-Parks show, his first in some 18 months, will come back with a double wind-up attraction next Tuesday at Turner's Arena.

Menendez already has signed up Aaron Perry, local Negro knockout king, for one eight-rounder, and Nick Latsios, the popular Greek from Alexandria, for the other eight.

Perry, a sure-fire hit in his last few appearances, has scored six knockouts in his eight professional matches.

Gallaudet Plays Fort Meade at Tech Tonight

Gallaudet College and Fort Meade will present free admission basketball at Tech High at 7:45 tonight in the only college court action of the night.

American University's scheduled game with the Navy Thunderbolts has been indefinitely postponed.

Fort Meade is the host team at Tech and the soldiers will hold open house. Gallaudet has won its only start, against Bridgewater, while Fort Meade has played several games, losing only to Mount St. Mary's.

University of Maryland Coach Burton Shipley has named a starting line-up for the Terps' opener with the Quantico Marines Saturday at College Park. Jack Flynn, from last year's freshmen and Joe Acito, of New Jersey, will start at forward with Gil Tauscher, 6-foot-6 at center and Dick Tushak, from the football team, and Frank Doory at guard. Shipley has trimmed the squad to 14 players.

The only other college games this week are out of town. American U. will play at Bridgewater Friday night and Washington College on Saturday while Gallaudet will play Loyola in Baltimore Saturday night.

Bears Defeat Dayton Five

Dayton, Ohio, Dec. 7 (Spl.).—Baskets by Gates and King in the final minutes of the third quarter pulled the ball game out of the fire for the Lichtman Bears here tonight and the invaders nosed out the Dayton Bombers, 41-39.

Bell, who scored 24 points against the Fort Wayne Zollners Monday night, again was top scorer, with 15 points. The Bears will play the second game of their series with the Zollners at Defiance, Ohio, tomorrow night and the third at Toledo Thursday. They return to Washington competition with a game at Turner's Arena Sunday.

AAU Track, Field Chairman Named

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—Ward Haylett of Kansas State College, Manhattan, Kans., was named chairman of the AAU track and field committee today by Laurence di Benedetto, national president, succeeding Lieut. Comdr. Lloyd Olds, now in active service.

Haylett was one of eight new chairmen named, 24 others retaining their posts with Di Benedetto remaining as head of the executive foreign relations groups.

Moss of Giants Traded to Orioles

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—Outfielder Howard Moss of the New York Giants was traded to the Baltimore Orioles of the International League for Catcher Joseph Becker today. No cash was involved in the deal.

Moss spent the 1942 campaign with Jersey City, the Giants' International League farm. Becker, however, will report to the National League club.

Today—More Than Ever Before—
Real Enjoyment Counts

The real enjoyment of a quality cigar is the greatest refresher in the world when the job is hard and the going is tough.

—and El Producto is doing its bit in furnishing real enjoyment for the men who are mounting the attack with incredible production records. There is nothing like the mild, easy solace of El Producto's character to take the sting out of a tense day.

Don't gripe if you cannot always get your pet shape at the nearest cigar counter. El Producto is serving as a "refresher" for the boys in the Services, too. We are doing our best, but the demand is overwhelming.

But you can always count on this one thing—no matter what the shape, every El Producto you smoke will maintain the quality that gives you the last word in real enjoyment.

Partial Text of Byrnes' Speech Warning Against Inflation

A partial text of last night's radio address by War Mobilization Director Byrnes follows:

Because we now know that we can win this war, too many of us are acting as if the war is already won. It is not. The most critical and the bloodiest battles of the war are ahead of us.

Our boys at the front are not fighting as if the war were already won. They know that much fighting and dying must come before victory brings peace. They are fighting harder than ever.

We on the home front must also fight harder than ever to win the war and stop the dying—to win the peace and make it lasting.

We have come a long way since Pearl Harbor. Instead of an Army of 1,635,000, today we have an Army of 7,390,000. That Army is better equipped and better trained than any army in history. Our progress in production is as encouraging to us as it is discouraging to our enemies. We produced last month almost as many airplanes as we had in our Army Air Forces at the time of Pearl Harbor. Instead of 330 fighting ships, our Navy can now boast of 840 fighting ships. Instead of 4812 airplanes, the Navy now has approximately 25,000 aircraft.

150,000 Planes to Date

We began our production program June 1, 1940. On this anniversary of Japanese treachery at Pearl Harbor, I am happy to announce for the benefit of Hirohito and Hitler that our 1500,000the airplane came off the assembly line today.

Now, two years after Pearl Harbor, we are approaching full mobilization for war. We are devoting more than 50 per cent of our national income to war.

The results of full mobilization have been tremendous. But we cannot afford to rest on our oars. Full mobilization does not necessarily mean that we are producing as much as we can or exactly the things we need most. The requirements of our war strategy are constantly changing.

Program review boards have been set up by the War and Navy Departments to function under the General Staff working in close cooperation with the Office of War Mobilization. Through these conbeen able to eliminate or reduce certain war programs in the staggering amount of 16 billion dollars. But a very considerable part of the savings achieved will be offset by the enlargement of other war programs which are essential to victory and which we were not before in a position to undertake.

This is no time for us to take our eye off the target.

We are streamlining our programs not to reduce our over-all effort but to increase it and make it more effective. If we abate for a week or day our production effort, if we take time out for pleasure or strike, we will weaken our fighting strength and expose our boys to injury and death when they most need our help. . . .

But I should be less than frank if I did not express the opinion that we are now facing a crisis on the home front which may deprive us of the very things for which we are fighting—a stable, peaceful, prosperous world. There is little chance of such a world unless, after this war, we can have a stable, peaceful and prosperous America. The prospect of a stable, peaceful and prosperous America is far from bright simply because the American people apparently do not realize the supreme importance of holding the line against inflation.

Individuals, Nation Must Save

I do not want to paint the picture blacker than it is. On the contrary, I think that the American people sometimes tend to disparage how much has really been accomplished on the home front. Our food production has been greater than the most optimistic would have predicted two years ago. Our living costs and production costs have been kept in line much better than most economists would have dared to predict two years ago. Our war production has attained a speed and volume that caused Premier Stalin in a toast at a Teheran dinner to say, "Without American production the United Nations could never have won the war." It was a toast to American industry and American workers in factory and on farm.

We can be proud of having held the line as well as we have in face of the enormous increase in Government expenditures and the enormous increase in the purchasing power of our people—far in excess of the available goods and services for consumers' use.

We as individuals and as a nation must save. Our war expenditures are now running at a rate in excess of 90 billion dollars a year. Our national debt is increasing at a rate in excess of 50 billion dollars a year. There is ot the slightest ground for believing that the cutbacks in our production program or any other possible economies will relieve the urgent need for greater savings and greater taxes in the near future.

We obviously have failed to adopt a tax program adequate for our war needs. But despite the failure to impose adequate taxes, we have done a much better job than we did during the last war in keeping costs down and in conserving the purchasing power of the people for their postwar needs. Although the income of our people as a whole has doubled since the outbreak of the war in 1939, the cost of living has increased only 26 per cent.

When prices reached their peak following the last war, the general price level was double what it was in 1914, and the value of the dollar—the value of the people's savings—was half of what it was in 1914. When prices collapsed in 1920 they dropped 45 per cent, bringing with them widespread unemployment, foreclosures and bankruptcy.

If we now abandon our efforts to hold the line, there is no reason to believe that we would fare better than we did after the last war.

It would therefore be tragic if after having held the line as well as we have, we should let it go as we start on what we hope is the final lap of the war. Tragic, because increased wages and increased prices will mean a price structure so high that at the end of the war we will not be able to sell in the markets of the world. When we cannot sell our goods it will mean unemployment. Tragic, because at a time when we should be using the power of a great and prosperous Nation to insure permanent peace, we will be forced to devote our energies to establishing relief projects to provide temporary jobs for returning soldiers.

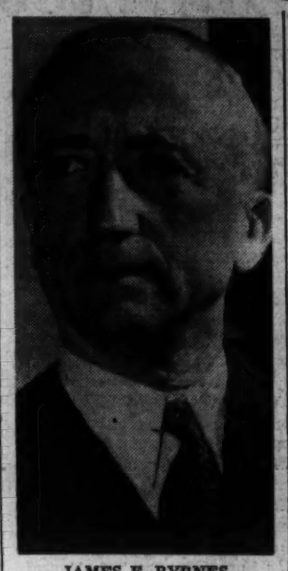
A year ago last October the Congress authorized the President to stabilize wages and prices on the basis of the levels prevailing on September 15, 1942, and authorized the use of subsidies when necessary to obtain needed production without increasing the cost of living. Of course the administration of that law was not easy, but the cost of living has risen only approximately 5 per cent during the year of drastic readjustments.

Less Economic Hardship

Holding the line may have caused some hardships here and there. But, by and large, there has actually been less economic hardship on the home front during the war than there was before the war.

Since December 7, 1941, the American people have paid off four billion dollars of debts. They hold 20 billion dollars of Government bonds above what they held December 7, 1941. They have accumulated in reserves for social security pensions and in reserves for insurance 10 billion dollars. Yet today they have in bank deposits and currency 18 billion dollars more than on Pearl Harbor day.

There is no evidence of hunger or of great privation among our people. The lines of people you see in the streets of our cities are not bread lines. They are people seeking an opportunity to spend their money at the movies or restaurants. . . .



JAMES F. BYRNES

If we do not hold the line now, I confess I do not know how or where we are going to hold back the floodgates of inflation. There are no prepared positions to which we can retreat. Some talk of controlled inflation. Such talk is just as criminally reckless as a proposal for a controlled flood or a controlled forest fire or a controlled epidemic of smallpox.

The primary issue before the American people today is whether we are going to keep down the cost of living. . . .

The Commodity Credit Corp. bill as now written is in effect a bill to increase the cost of living. If it becomes law, it will immediately increase food prices 7 per cent and the cost of living more than 3 per cent. But those increases would be only the beginning.

The President has stated, and the War Labor Board has issued solemn warnings, that it will be impossible to hold the "Little Steel" formula and to deny general wage increases if the cost of living is not held down at least to the present level. If the general wage increases in excess of the "Little Steel" formula are allowed, retail food prices will rise still higher, clothing prices and furniture prices will rise still further. The Government will have to pay more on its war contracts, and billions will be added to the costs of running the war and to the Government's war debts.

The cost of the Administration's limited program of subsidies will be small indeed compared to that increase in the Government's war debt. That increased debt will be an additional burden for our soldiers to bear in the years to come. To kill subsidies will be a hardship to their families now. A short time ago Congress voted a small increase in the allowances for the dependents of men in the armed services. Kill subsidies, increase the cost of living and we will take that increase away from them.

Killing subsidies will hurt everybody. It will ultimately increase the cost of everything we buy. When we cash our victory bonds we find that the dollars we get will buy only a part of what they would have bought at the time of our investment. We will find that the amount of our insurance policies is no longer sufficient to protect our families.

Killing subsidies will hurt the farmer. For years the farmers have been paid subsidies of various kinds. It was essential in order to preserve American agriculture. It is essential today to provide support prices in order to insure production. But farmers will realize that the legislator who is persuaded today that the subsidy for meat and bread is unwise may be persuaded tomorrow that the subsidy or support price for potatoes and peanuts is unwise.

Upon the recommendation of the President, Congress in 1942 wrote into the Stabilization Law a provision that farmers shall receive a guaranteed price of not less than 90 per cent of parity for staple crops for two years from the first day of January following the declaration of the termination of hostilities. It provided encouragement to farmers to take the risks of increased production. It was supported by representatives of labor as well as of farmers.

To make that provision effective will require appropriations by a future Congress. If the present Congress now refuses to make the appropriations required to make the stabilization program effective, a future Congress may hesitate to make the appropriations necessary to support farm prices as a part of that program. That must not happen.

Restrict Ceilings

Farm leaders who spend their time criticizing labor and labor leaders who spend their time criticizing farmers are not helping either farmer or laborer and in time of war certainly not helping the United States.

There are some who say: "I favor the Commodity Credit Corp. bill to do away with subsidies. But I am only against subsidies. I do not favor raising OPA ceilings. They are already high enough. I am not for wage increases. Wages are already too high."

If those who support legislation against subsidies do not want prices to go up and wages to go up, they should provide specifically in the law that the removal of a subsidy shall not be ground for raising OPA ceiling prices.

They should provide that further increases in the cost of living shall not be recognized by the War Labor Board as ground for approving wage increases.

They would then take the responsibility for depriving the farmer and the manufacturer and the retailer of a fair return. They would take the responsibility for denying the wage earners increases to compensate them for the rise in the cost of living.

We must make up our minds whether we want to hold the line or break the line.

Labor's View Toward Prices

Lack of firm support for the stabilization program and for the efforts of the Office of Economic Stabilization, the Office of Price Administration and the War Labor Board to hold the cost of living and wage costs as nearly as feasible at the levels prevailing on October 2, 1942, has caused some labor groups to determine to abolish the "Little Steel" formula. They say that the Congress is not supporting OPA's effort to hold down the cost of living and that they must consequently be allowed to secure wage increases in excess of the "Little Steel" formula. That seems to be the position of the steel workers, who ask an increase of 17 cents an hour. They do not threaten to strike. But there are others who do threaten that they will strike unless requests before the War Labor Board for increases above the steel formula are granted.

I know that there are those who say that wage increases should be granted because the Administration has already yielded to the coal miners. The increases to the coal miners were not general wage increases in excess of the Little Steel formula. They were increases granted for additional hours to be worked by the miners except in the case of those whose travel time was more than the average travel time. Those having more on the ground that the previous method of computing their pay unfairly discriminated against them. At the request of the War Labor Board the President has appointed a committee to investigate and report on what is the actual travel time in the mines so that the contracts with the miners may be related to the actual travel time.

It is said that Secretary Ickes gave the miners a general wage increase. It is even said that he did so by direction of the President. The Secretary says that the agreement was not known to anyone other than the conferees until after it was agreed to. The agreement did not provide for a general wage increase. It provided for an additional 15 minutes of work and an increase of 37½ cents for that additional work. That was the rate for overtime work.

Former Policy Urged

The decision made by the War Labor Board in the coal miners' case was confessedly a very close one. The Board was reluctant to sanction the agreement because of the failure of the men to return to work before it was made. The board has stated that in the future it will not approve any agreement made under the threat of a strike.

But the lesson to be drawn from the coal case is not that we should hold the line less firmly but more firmly. It illustrates the danger of trying to find ways out of hard cases.

There is pending in the Congress a bill to increase the price of milk. There are also several bills to increase the price of oil.

The operating railroad workers feel aggrieved. A panel awarded to them an increase of 4 cents an hour—on the ground that it was all they were entitled to under the Little Steel formula. This award was approved by the Stabilization Director. They say others have fared better than they were. It is always easy to point to those who have fared better than we have. It is not so easy to dwell on the plight of those who have not fared so well. They threaten to strike unless the executive branch of the Government approves a greater increase for them than has been awarded.

The nonoperating railroads employes also feel aggrieved . . . The non operating employes are now appealing to the Congress under the threat of strike in wartime to give them an 8-cent increase instead of the 10-to-4-cent increase awarded to them.

It is one thing for the Congress to repeal the law or to revise the general policies which it has entrusted to the Administration to administer. It is quite another thing to enact a special law for a special group without laying down a general policy applicable to all.

It is one thing for the Congress to declare by law that the stabilization director shall approve every request for an increased wage where employer and employe agree. It is quite another thing to enact a special law approving an increase because of such an agreement in one case and to fail to pass laws granting increases in other cases . . .

If Congress fixes the wages of one group that is dissatisfied with the decision of the stabilization director how can it refuse to fix the wages of other groups?

It is truly impossible for any Administration to attempt to administer equal justice under law if special groups, be they oil or coal producers or coal miners or railroad employes, can get special treatment.

No group has a right to hold a political pistol at the head of the Congress or of any administrative agency and say that they will strike. Any group which threatens to strike in wartime unless the executive or the legislative branch of the Government meets its demands, is using a political pistol. The Government must say to any such group, "Lay that pistol down."

Tonight American soldiers from factory and farm are fighting to preserve freedom for factory and farm. Fortune may favor some and death may beckon others. But they do not complain. Tonight wherever they are, they are happy to learn that the United States Great Britain, Russia, and China are united in plans for victory and pesce. That unity should inspire greater unity at home.

I know the power of the leaders of labor, agriculture, and industry. I also know their patriotism. I appeal to them to exercise their great influence in support of the wise restraints we have imposed upon ourselves. I appeal to them to help their Government hold the line so that we will not lose the peace while our boys win the war.

Msgr. McCormick To Be Honor Guest At Dinner Tonight

The Right Rev. Msgr. Patrick J. McCormick, recently installed as rector of Catholic University, will be honor guest at a dinner tonight at 7:30 at the Statler given by faculty members, alumni and alumnae of the university.

"The occasion," said Vincent L. Toomey, Class of 1909, chairman of the committee in charge, "will give former students and members of the teaching staff opportunity to express publically their fealty to the new administrative head."

The program includes offering of grace by the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary Bishop of Washington and Baltimore, and a welcoming address by Chairman Toomey. The toastmaster will be United States Attorney Edward M. Curran, who was graduated from Catholic University School of Law in 1929.

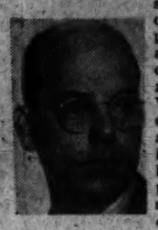
The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Government to Defer More Accountants

The President's draft deferment committee soon will relax its rules to permit the deferment of additional accountants in the Federal service. Accountants in private industry are automatically deferred as they are on War Manpower's critical list and the pending order will be a step toward putting Government account on an equal footing with them. These employes, in the order listed, are on the Government's unofficial roster of "nondeferable" jobs: (1) lawyers, (2) personnel officers, (3) economists, and (4) statisticians. Only a handful of people in these jobs have been deferred.



Meantime, the heat is on the Administration to loosen up its tight draft deferment policy to permit the deferment of more people, particularly fathers who have had years of Government experience. The administrator of one Federal agency that stands to lose half of its key people laid his case before Assistant President James Byrnes the other day and frankly told him that unless he could get more people deferred his war program would collapse. The truth is that top-notch people are leaving their Federal jobs every day to go back to private industry where they know they'll be deferred. In brief, the Government is discriminating against itself. Insiders believes that Uncle Sam will be compelled to ease its draft deferment policy but they don't expect any major action before the New Year.

Chances now appear to be very good that Uncle Sam's per diem employes will be paid for Christmas Day which will be a holiday. Both Army and Navy have asked the comptroller general for another ruling. Christmas falls on Saturday and it isn't considered a regular workday as the per diem employes in the Navy yards and Army arsenals get overtime pay for the day. That's why it was first believed they wouldn't be paid for the holiday. Further, it's barely possible that Congress will act to get them paid. Representative Randolph, at the suggestion of the American Federation of Government Employes, has introduced a bill which would give the per diems full pay for Christmas.

The rationing division at the Office of Price Administration soon will be reorganized. The revamping is being worked out by Col. Bryan Houston . . . Oscar M. Powell of the Social Security Board has returned from Venezuela where he helped that government set up a social security system . . . Civil Service Commissioner Arthur S. Flemming told the Senate Appropriations Committee, that the commission soon would recommend to Congress a plan whereby people who spend less than five years in the Federal service would be allowed to use money in their retirement accounts to pay up their social security accounts. He explained the civil service retirement system was of no benefit whatever to many thousands of war service appointees. Furthermore, that under the present law, people who serve the Government for less than five years are penalized by social security.

This is CIVILIAN DAY at the War Department. It's the day that civilians will be recognized in a small way, at least, for the contribution they're making in winning the war. An estimated 21,000 employes will be given civilian service emblems which will signify that they have been working for the department for at least six months. At a token ceremony to be held in Pentagon court at 11:30, 17 employes will be given the ribbons. At the same time War Secretary Stimson personally will award two employes the emblem for exceptional civilian service, and five outstanding workers will get the coveted emblems for meritorious service. During the day similar ceremonies will be held in each of the department's bureaus. For example, Major General Gregory of the Quartermaster Corps will present 51 of his employes—one from each State—with the six-month ribbons.

War Production Board is really doing a job in better utilizing its employes. A job utilization unit was set up several weeks ago with some misgivings under Personnel Director Carlton Hayward. In the past two weeks it has listened to 344 employes, who said their skills weren't being utilized for one reason or another, and only 28 of them were lost. The unit got 268 of them reassigned or saw to it that they got work which suited them. Nearly 50 cases are still pending. At the disposal of the unit is a list of the qualifications of all WPB employes, so when a vacancy must be filled it tries to do it with someone who is dissatisfied in his present job. It isn't at all uncommon for the unit to order three and four way shifts to fit an employe in a job. Other agencies would do well to study the WPB system.

Even Faulty Home Rule Held Better

With the assertion that "home rule, with all its faults, would be an improvement over the type of administration the District now has," Chairman McCarran of the Senate District Committee yesterday opened a series of three hearings on Washington self-government.

The Senator from Nevada also declared that he seriously doubted that District residents ever had lost the right to vote in national elections, harking back to the early days of the city's history for his statement.

"The District of Columbia was carved from two States," he pointed out; "its people were not. Did this mean that they lost their suffrage?"

McCarran's question was directed at Dr. Meyer Jacobstein of Brookings Institution, first witness to appear, who replied: "That is a moot question, Senator; however, they did lost the right to vote for their own home rule."

Doctor Jacobstein effectively halted questions from visitors at the hearing on the constitutionality of granting statehood to the District by saying: "Why go into that now? There is no bill pending on that question. We of the District should not confuse the issue now; we should keep the discussion of statehood out of the picture while we concentrate on the matter at hand. I think our only chance of accomplishing anything is to achieve local self-government first."

The Brookings expert, who announced before his testimony that he was appearing in a "personal" capacity because Brookings as a whole has not directed its attention to the matter, was one of two witnesses appearing yesterday. The remaining four whose names were on the first day's schedule will be carried over until 10:30 a. m. today, when the hearing will continue.

McCarran, interjecting the most colorful comments of the opening session, told 50-odd witnesses and spectators that the necessity for a change in local government was brought to his attention most forcibly during the investigation some weeks ago of Gallinger Hospital, which he described as needing "complete and rigid reformation." Its present condition, he added, is "deplorable."

Not Original Intent

"I am convinced that nothing short of a constitutional form of government will grant a state form of government to the city," the chairman remarked. "Such was not the intent of the men who framed the Constitution, of that I am sure. But a Constitutional amendment would mean great delay—perhaps eventual defeat. I am also convinced of the District's right to self-government. Similar conditions prevailed before, and home rule fell because of conditions related in history. It was set aside apparently at great financial loss to the people.

"If District residents want self-government, the opportunity is before them. Speaking strictly personally, I will say that home rule with all its faults would be an improvement over what we have now."

Dr. Jacobstein, one of the members of the charter commission in Rochester, N. Y., 15 years ago, and a former Representative from that State, said that his testimony would bypass the Holman resolution, setting up machinery for a charter commission, as "unnecessary procedure," and would concentrate on McCarran's bill providing for an elected board of seven commissioners empowered to appoint a city manager.

Council of 531 Men

The doctor quoted an earlier statement by Senator Burton (Republican) of Ohio before a Judiciary subcommittee, in which he said that "531 men (comprising the memberships of the Senate and House) constitute themselves the common council of a city government—it is as silly as it is impractical."

McCarran interposed that he agreed wholeheartedly with Burton's contention that Congress lacked the time to handle District affairs. "It's a lucky District Committee meeting when we have four or five members—not because they are not interested, but because they have other more pressing duties. Take today, for example; several of the subcommittee members cannot be present because they have important meetings elsewhere. It's difficult to get a reasonable quorum."

Three of the five-man subcommittee were at the hearing—McCarran, Burton and Senator Bushfield (Republican) of South Dakota. The other two, Senator Tydings (Democrat) of Maryland and Overton (Democrat) of Louisiana, were detained at another committee meeting.

Suggested Improvements

Jacobstein's suggestions for improvements to McCurran's self-styled "skeleton" bill included:

1—Reference to members of the board as councilmen instead of commissioners "to get away from the present idea of a commission form of government."

2—Addition of two members-at-large to be named by the President, thus continuing White House interest in District affairs.

3—Reduction of salaries, set in the bill at $8000 per year, because "councilmen would be able to do the required amount of work on a part-time basis."

4—Removal from office of the city manager at the discretion of the board, instead of limiting his term to six years.

5—Staggering of terms so that the entire board would not be elected simultaneously.

6—Lengthening of board members' terms from the two years provided in the bill.

Wilbur Finch, chairman of the local suffrage committee of the Federation of Citizens' Associations, testified that his organization concurred in many of Doctor Jacobstein's suggestions and added these proposals:

Would Go Further

1. Removal of the city manager for "cause" rather than miscon-
(Here Senator Bushfield decla
"I'd go farther than that, Mr. Finch; I'd say that the council could remove him without cause.")

2. Omit the requirement of Senate approval of the city manager's appointment;

3. Clarification of department heads to be named by the city manager;

4. Omission of details concerning clerical workers in the bill, on the grounds that such provisions could be made in the general budget.

Chairman McCarran adjourned the hearing at noon, when the Senate convened, and emphasized that the public would be welcomed at the remaining sessions today and tomorrow, all to be held in the Senate District Committee room on the second floor of the Capitol.

"The city manager should be removed from office for 'cause' rather than for misconduct, as stated in your bill," Wilbur S. Finch, chairman of the local suffrage committee of the Federation of Citizens Association, tells Chairman McCarran of the Senate District Committee at the opening home-rule hearing yesterday on Capitol Hill

Wiley Urges Representative, Senator for D.C.

Senator Wiley (Republican) of Wisconsin last night came out in favor of a constitutional amendment "to give the District of Columbia one Senator and one Representative."

Speaking at the seventy-eighth birthday banquet of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants at the Hotel 2400, the Senator strongly intimated his agreement with a statement by Theodore W. Noyes, president of the association and editor of the Evening Star, that "our hope for betterment is through national representation which we continue to seek."

Sick Bed Message

Referring to the opening of hearings on the McCarran "District home rule bill" yesterday, Noyes declared in a message from his sick bed, read by Vice President Jesse C. Suter:

"I recognize fully the sincerity of our citizens who favor this legislation, but I do not share in their optimism as to the beneficial outcome. Congress is the actual governing body of the District of Columbia and I believe it always will be."

Pleading for "fiscal equity, political equity, fair play for Washingtonians," Noyes indorsed the resolutions of Representative Sumners (Democrat) of Texas and Senator Capper (Republican) of Kansas, both pending in the judiciary committees, for a constitutional amendment to grant District residents voting privileges in national elections.

Commends Overton

Noyes also commended Senator Overton of Louisiana for "trying to induce Congress to adopt a business-like formula for determining a more equitable annual payment by the United States toward the expenses of the District as a substitute for the very unfair and inequitable lump-sum payment plan which is by law the present practice."

John Clagett Proctor presided and the invocation was read by the Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, Senate chaplain. Among the more than 200 guests were Commissioners John Russell Young and Charles W. Kutz, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president, Board of Education; Granville Gude, president, Board of Trade; Harry S. Wender, president, Federation of Citizens' Associations, Charles H. Bates, president, Society of Natives; Mrs. Arthur Charles Watkins, pfesident, District Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. John T. Lucker, president, Women's City Club.

Serenity of D. C. Government Laid Mainly to 'Legal Dodo'

By Hanson H. Hathaway

Despite congressional inquiries and newspaper tempests, life in the District Building flows smoothly on and on—through these days of fall and early winter—chiefly because the average citizen of the District of Columbia is a legal dodo.

Alien to rights and privileges that citizens of the rest of the United States take for granted, residents of the Nation's Capital do not for the National Government nor do they have any elective voice in the affairs of their own community—a community for whose government, if the District budget makers have guessed right, they will raise approximately 60 million dollars this year.

Unlike the citizen in every other part of this country, the District resident's duties are not matched by rights. He is income taxed, property assessed and levied against to keep up some 16,000 employes at the tune of 37 million dollars, and to provide upwards of 23 million dollars for 42 major functions and departments, broken down into 61 diverse activities.

How this money is spent is not for him to decide, according to the Constitution which catches the men and women of Washington between the Scylla of State determination and the Charyodis of Federal independence.

Legally, the District is a Federal dependency, run on the basis of a municipal corporation. In the areas, however, that are the locations of Federal activities it is a Territory.

Not Even a Dependency

Considering taxation alone, the District is not even a dependency of the Federal Government. Exercising the authority through Congress and the three Commissioners who are appointed by the President, the Governmeht contributes but a small part to District maintenance.

All of six million dollars is expected in Federal funds as contribution to this year's estimated 67 million dollar budget.

Although the District citizen has no voice in the enactment of local ordinances or Federal rulings nor in the election of those who govern him, all laws of the Nation apply to him, as do certain State laws. Due to the peculiar status of the District as an area with certain State powers, rates are fixed by a Public Utilities Commission, motor vehicles are licensed and taxed, and general taxes on behalf of the Federal Government are imposed.

On this point, Chief Justice John Marshall of the United States Supreme Court has ruled: "Although, in theory, it might be more congenial to the spirit of our institutions to admit a representative from the District, it may be doubted whether, in fact, its interests would be rendered thereby the more secure; and, certainly, the Constitution does not consider their want of representation in Congress as exempting it from equal taxation."

In 1801, Congress granted the District a municipal government elected by popular vote. This lasted 70 years and from 1871 to 1874, it was administered as a territory.

The authority to change the form of government in the District is vested in Congress and, at present, the community is governed by three Commissioners appointed by the President.

Headed by Young

John Russell Young, former president of the White House Correspondents Association, is head of the District Commission. Guy Mason, also a former White House correspondent, is the second ranking Commissioner. Brig. Gen. Charles Kutz is Engineer Commissioner and, while selected by the President, is actually detailed to the assignment by the Army Engineers Corps.

The three Commissioners are charged with the responsibility for District administration, subject to congressional approval of their decisions. They are aided in their duties of supervising the work of 42 department heads with their 16,000 employes by special assistants and by a cordon of men who have made, by tenure alone, a career of municipal government.

Such is the organization of the District of Columbia that may be at any given time a city, a State, a Federal appendage or, in the words of John Citizen, a "what-is-it?"

Mailing Fails to Keep Pace With Gift Buying

Christmas shoppers are flooding Washington Department stores as sales run 15 per cent above the same week last year but they are not rushing to the postoffice to mail their Yule parcels.

The Christmas rush was apparent in department stores throughout the Capital yesterday as children pushed their way toward Santa Claus in toylands, mothers crammed packages into bulging shopping bags, and servicemen looked around hesitantly for gifts to send mother and the girl friend.

"But the volume of Christmas mail is not enough to satisfy us at the postoffice," said District Postmaster Vincent C. Burke, who explained that while more packages were being sent now than this time last year, the present volume is not great enough in proportion to the anticipated peak.

Postmaster Burke reminded that December 10 is the deadline for mailing packages with assurances that they will reach their destination by Christmas. Approximately 35 per cent of mailers are including zone numbers on the parcels, but it would be a great aid to inexperienced wrokers added for the holiday rush if more would use these numbers, he added.

Edward D. Shaw, secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, said yesterday that the department stores are recruiting workers from every group available—housewives, former employes who left to marry, and high-school students. One large department store has employed 600 high-school girls to work in the afternoons and on Saturdays during the holiday season.

Merchandise stocks are dwindling rapidly, shaw said, explaining that customers are taking what they can find and are thankful to get it in view of war shortages. Restrictions on metals have been reflected in toys this year as wood predominates. The military theme is outstanding in playthings as the youngsters play war.

Air Line Opposes Bus Firm's Plan to Operate Plane Route

Granting of a charter to a bus line to operate air service was challenged yesterday in a move that may determine whether surface carriers will be permitted to participate in the coming "air age" or whether their entrance into another transportation field will be prevented as a move toward monopoly.

The issue, at stake in the pending civil aviation bill (HR 3420), introduced by Chairman Lea of the House Interstate and Foreign Committee, was brought up when Pennsylvania-Central Airlines filed a petition seeking to set aside the franchise recently granted Great Lakes Greyhound Skyways, a subsidiary of the Greyhound Bus Lines, according to PCA officials, by the Michigan State Board of Aeronautics to operate intrastate helicopter service.

A spokesman for the Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday said the board had no jurisdiction in intrastate traffic. According to the official, this was the first case know to the board in which a surface carrier was admitted to air operation.

The Civil Aeronautics Act provides that a surface carrier may control an air carrier when it is found "that the transaction proposed will promote the public interest by enabling such carrier other than an air carrier to use aircraft to public advantage in its operation and will not restrain competition."

Robert J. Wilson, vice president and counsel of PCA, charged in his petition, which was filed with the State Aviation Board, Gov. Harry Kelley, the Attorney General, and the Michigan State Highway Commissioner, that "the grant of an aviation certificate to the Greyhound organization would give that company a transportation monopoly."

The appeal also questioned "the granting of a certificate to a bus company which has no experience in aviation when no equipment is presently available and when the development of the helicopter is still in the experimntal stag."

City-Wide Christmas Rites To Be Held at Cathedral

By Robert Tate Allan

The City-wide Christmas Day religious service which President Roosevelt customarily attends will be held this year at the Washington Cathedral, it was learned last night.

The Chief Executive has been invited to be present, according to Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, executive secretary of the Federation of Churches, sponsor of the service.

A new feature of this year's service will be a clerical procession. Principal speaker will be Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, pastor of First Baptist Church and new president of the District of Columbia Convention of Baptist Churches.

Others on the program will be the Cathedral clergy, Dr. Halley B. Taylor, pastor of Fifteenth Street Presbyterian Church and former moderator of the Washington City Presbytery, and Dr. Seth R. Brooks, pastor of the Universalist National Memorial Church and general chairman of the committee on religious life in the Nation's Capital. Also Dr. Clarence W. Crawford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, and Dr. John W. Rustin, president of the Federation of Churches and pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church.

School Bond Jeep Drive Ends, With Reports Expected Friday

The war bond and stamp drive for the purchase of Army jeeps, participated in by 132 District public schools, was officially closed yesterday with reports asked for by Friday, school officials announced.

Initial reports which trickled into the Board of Education indicated the various schools would not only reach but surpass their record drive of last year which enabled them to purchase 398 jeeps and raise approximately $358,200.

First of the District schools to report was the Paul Junior High School where the 1325 students contributed $5000 in bonds and $1000 in stamps.

Maryland schools were also having drives. Bladensburg High School in Bladensburg, Md., announced that their campaign had netted $1449 yesterday and that last week the students had raised $431 for a total of $1880.

The 381 students at Berwyn Elementary School in Berwyn had a record of 100 per cent purchases, raising $1500.

District school officials said totals should be computed by Saturday when all of the reports should be received.

NCHA Goes Ahead Amid Civic Protest

While protests mounted last night against activities of the National Capital Housing Authority and even led to a resolution by the Southeast Council of Citizens Association "that Congress immediately carry out a sweeping investigation of all public housing projects and agencies," the NCHA went ahead with its project in the area of 49th st., Fitch pl., Division st. and Washington pl.

A delegation of the Washington Taxpayers Association, headed by President Rufus S. Lusk, registered complaint with Commissioner John Russell Young against extension of the NCHA power to condemn "substandard" housing in any part of the city as incorporated in a bill amending the Alley Dwelling Act now before the Bureau of the Budget.

Housing Condemned

The Southeast Council, enlarging upon the demand to abolish NCHA adopted by the Federation of Citizens Associations Saturday, asked that the National Park and Planning Commission "be designated as the authority of review in matters of housing."

A 10-page housing report, drawn up by Chairman Joseph H. Deckman, particularly denounced "the construction of 40 temporary housing units on the land adjacent to the Stanton School, Naylor rd. and Alabama ave., as one of the most deplorable developments which has been fostered on Southeast Washington, (in which) the education of approximately 500 prospective school children is completely ignored by the NCHA and the District Commissioners."

In the meantime, John Ihlder, NCHA executive officer, said following a hearing on the broadening of 50th st. ne., that he intends to go ahead with plans. He added that the Highway Department would widen the street, if NCHA would not do it, since the street is only 25 feet wide and District streets are supposed to be 60 feet in width.

Changes Outlined

Ihlder also declared that widening of 50th st. would necessitate tearing down 18 or 20 houses. Representatives at the meeting, including local residents, civic associations, and various housing committees, favored continuance of the project which would add 300 homes to the community.

Meanwhile, the Taxpayer Association's delegation protested against granting the authority permission to condemn land and buildings, replat streets and build any kind of structure it wishes, houses, apartments, stores and shops in almost any part of the District.

"This proposal is nothing but socialized housing in its most radical form," according to Lusk.

Deckman followed the same argument and "strongly recommended that the General Accounting Office be instructed to audit the books of NCHA."

Ihlder answered Lusk's charges by saying that he believed the contents of the amendment as sent to the Budget Bureau confidential until it is sent to the President. He said that it was drafted at the request of Representative Randolph (Democrat) of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee.

Tardy Service Charged.

He noted that the amendment quoted by Lusk was almost an exact duplicate of part of the U. S. Housing Authority Act of 1937 under which Federal funds are lent to local agencies throughout the country.

Ihlder added that the proposal has nothing to do with "slum areas" but would extend slum reclamation to individual slum houses throughout the District and allow their redevelopment for purposes for which they seem best suited.

Lusk and Deckman agreed that the authority's work was intended by Congress to be limited to some 200 squares of alley dwellings. Deckman pointed out that the NCHA has "eliminated less than 10 per cent of inhabited alleys" since 1934, although all dwellings are supposed to be cleared by next July 1.

Deckman's report drew attention to the recommendation of the Board of Education to the commissioners "to purchase the land on which the NCHA is now constructing the 40 temporary housing units." It strongly protested against the "arbitrary" denial of all appeals of "85,000 citizens of Southeast Washington" in this and other housing matters.

Those accompanying Lusk to talk with Commissioner Young yesterday were E. C. Baltz, Morris Cafritz, David B. Karrick, James McD. Shea, all of the Washington Taxpayers Association; Lew S. Mohler, president, Building Owners and Manager Association of the District; J. Garrett Beltzell, Home Builders Association of Mertopolitan Washington, and Joseph H. Deckman, chairman, House and Rent Control Committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Police Continue Probe of Woman's Death From Gas

Police are still investigating the death of Mrs. Mary C. Wissman, 42, who was found Monday with her husband, Edward, 55 in the gas filled bedroom of their apartment at 226 G st. nw.

Police said they found Mrs. Wissman on the floor and her husband, who was nearly asphyxiated, lying on the bed. Both were taken to Freedman's Hospital and Wissman later was transferred to Gallinger.

Gas supposedly escaped from a leaking pipe. An autopsy was performed yesterday on Mrs. Wissman, but the results were not made public and Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald had not yet issued a certificate.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Boy, 10, Whose Parents Are Divorced, Wants Mother to Withdraw Him From Military School; Father Is Not Cooperative; She Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a son, 10, a student at a military academy for the past two years. He is very capable in his studies and the general discipline has been excellent for him; but emotionally, he has never become wholly adjusted to the situation, and he is unhappy. Although the school is non-sectarian, in the sense of admitting students of all faiths, it does give major emphasis to one religious creed that is in conflict with mine.

I am divorced, and my former husband recently re-married, for the third time. He is 51 and I am 34, and a very incompatible relationship brought us to the parting of the ways. I have never explained the situation to the boy; nor has he ever questioned me, despite the fact that he visits both of us during his holidays. Do you think he should be given a clear understanding of events? And if so, what attitude is best, in order to erase any distorted ideas he may have? He is a very serious and sensitive child; and I want to invest him with noble and uprighteous thoughts concerning marriage and life. What reading matter can you recommend that deals with children in this category?

Last summer my son spent his three months' holiday with me. (I was recuperating from an operation.) We were devoted, inseparable pals,—more than just mother and son;—and all summer long he pleaded with me to take him home and send him to public school. Although my former husband can well afford to send our son to a better school, he is not in favor of a change. And being an atheist, he is indifferent to the religious instruction the boy receives. He provides maintenance adequate for this academy, which is among the least expensive of institutions. And due to my need to earn a living, and also because I am at present caring for my sister, who is recuperating from an operation, I have left the boy in that school. However, I promised him that there might be a possibility for us to be together in the near future.

Children quickly grow up; and so soon take up their own independent lives. And with the world so dark from the horrors of war, and with our own lives fraught with instability and uncertainty, would it seem selfish if I desired to have my son close to me now, since he is a great source of happiness?

MRS. D. W.

Impulse to Safeguard Is Proof of True Love

DEAR MRS. D. W.: The desire to personally supervise the mental, physical and spiritual growth of one's children is the most wholesome manifestation of true mother love. Thus, if your desire to have your son with you is animated by the wish to administer to his happiness and welfare,—and not by a melancholy yearning to have him under your roof as a close sentimental companion, "more than a son," figuring as a substitute source of happiness to assuage your divorcee's emotional frustrations,—it is a right and proper aspiration; and definitely deserves to be realized.

In other words, the inner motivation of the desire determines whether or not it is selfish; and whether or not it would be more beneficial or harmful to the boy to bring him home to the circumstances you have to offer. If you know your intent to be unselfish and responsibly minded; and if you are convinced that you have the wherewithal of wisdom and character to "give" to him, up to the level of his heart-hungry need to receive, (from one parental source), double-measure of steadfast and strong parental devotion,—(rather than to "take from" him in a wistful fellowship of vaguely troubled emotional insecurity),—then my advice is: Don't rest content until you have obliged your former husband to supply the means necessary to provide home-and-mother care for the boy.

Boy Specially Needs Mother's Home Care

IT IS MY feeling, indeed, that if your heart is at all "right," your son's chances of permanently recovering from the anguished psychological stresses he has undoubtedly suffered, prior to and following your divorce, depend upon his finding himself restored to a "home situation" with you, with the assurance (borne out in experience) that he is to live uninterruptedly with you hereafter, until he has got his growth and embarked by choice on a life of his own. And that brings us to a consideration of your past policy of keeping him in the dark about the whys and wherefores of the divorce.

In my opinion, that policy has been a mistake. The greatest kindness you could have done your son, in the circumstances, would have been to constructively "condition" him, all along, to a casually discursive attitude toward the divorce,—an event which should have been interpreted to him as a civilized solution of an ill-advised partnership; but a partnership that had nevertheless declared one priceless dividend, namely, himself: your splendid son. Be judicious and charitable in discussing his father. Don't voice resentful, disparaging sentiments,—for remember: he IS the boy's father; and the boy's self-esteem (particularly at his present age) will be vitally affected, for better or worse, by his appraisal of his father's character and performance; and his viewpoint will be largely determined by yours.

Ennoble His Thoughts By Elevating Your Own

SO, IN TOUCHING lightly on the reasons for divorce, impute the blame (if any) as much to "wrong choice" on your part as to incompatible aspects of the father's personality; and sermonize a bit, in passing, on the importance-to-marriage of choosing one's partner wisely and well. Thus indirectly you will be sowing the seeds of "noble and uprighteous thoughts concerning marriage and life," while gradually erasing any distorted ideas he may have acquired (from your past silence), to the effect that your relationship with his father was an unmentionably painful piece of personal history. As for reading matter that deals specifically with children in his category,—I know of none. However, any reading matter that elevated your mind would automatically benefit him; and the writings of Emmet Fox, —"The Sermon on the Mount," for instance; or "Power Through Constructive Thinking," — are probably just what you need to clear your vision.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

It's About Time

It's about time to let the children make gifts for their grandmothers. They can decorate cylindrical cartons (pint size) to hold a ball of yarn and keep it from rolling away. Yarn goes through hole in lid. Cover with paint and/or paper cut-outs.

Nutritionist Talks on Latin America

"Our Neighbors in the Other Americas" will be the theme of the program for the meeting of the District of Columbia Home Economics Association, 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night in the Washington Gas Light Co.'s Auditorium.

A first-hand account of the nutrition and health of the children in some of the South American countries will be presented by Miss Marjorie M. Heseltine, nutrition consultant, Children's Bureau, United States Department of Labor. Miss Heseltine has just recently returned from a three-month trip to South America, where she acted as technical assistant in nutrition to the United States representative on a special committee of the American International Institute for the Protection of Children, which met in Montevideo, Uruguay. While in South America, Miss Heseltine also spent some time in Argentina, Peru and Paraguay.

Miss Heseltine has an enviable reputation in the home economics and nutrition fields. Her experience is international in scope and includes teaching, research, field secretary for the American Home Economics Association, magazine contributions, and collaboration on books on foods and nutrition.

A sound film in technicolor "Our Neighbors Down the Road," will also be shown.

P. T. A. Education Group Sponsors Panel

The second meeting of the parent education group, sponsored jointly by the George Washington University and the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers, will be held tomorrow morning at 9:45 in room 301, Hall of Government, at the university.

At the organization meeting held last week, the group chose the subjects they wished to have discussed, first of which is "What the P-TA can do to help the schools."

Dean James Harold Fox of the School of Education of the university, will lead the discussion. Registrations for the class still may be made, with Mrs. Hildegarde Davenport, chairman of the parent-education committee of the District of Columbia Congress.

Cleaning a spotted rug is no longer a messy, back-breaking chore. The flip-flop of potato chips, chicken salad or cookies on your rug need not throw you into a frenzy. Mrs. John Harvey meets such a situation with calmness. She doesn't have to don a house dress to eradicate the soil. Here she is applying an absorbent cotton to rout her grease-spotted rug

Christmas housecleaning time is with us again. Dirt will collect whether you live in spacious homes or small quarters. A great percentage of wartime Washington's population is living in glorified postage stamp space. In the one-room or efficiency apartment, the kitchen is in closer contact with the living room than is good for meticulous living. Eating in the living room and treking back and forth from the kitchen isn't conducive to a spic and span floor covering.

Oftener than not, cleaning begins at the bottom—the rug. And it is especially important that every homemaker do right by her floor coverings. No household item has gone to war more thoroughly than wool carpeting. It is not alone because woolen articles are a necessity, but because the great looms have been humming with the weaving of canvas, duck and blankets. This condition acentuates the emphasis which should be placed on the care of floor coverings.

This doesn't mean there are no rugs and carpets in the stores. It does mean that inventories are limited. New types of floor coverings have made their appearance. Manufacturers have blended wool with rayon fibers. Cotton rugs too have come into the picture. But even with these innovations, supplies are not too plentiful.

Rug Care Misunderstood

Rug care is one of the most misunderstood jobs in housekeeping. Women who are meticulous in caring for fine curtains and draperies, always polishing the silver and shining the glassware, often neglect giving floor coverings the care which they deserve considering their cost, beauty and decorative value. Floor coverings are a major investment. They should not be treated shabbily. That arch enemy, dirt, should be routed from rugs and carpets with a regular program, as well as when an emergency demands.

In spite of the efficiency of the vacuum cleaner, grit will become embedded in the rug base. Dirt particles, together with the gases of the air, cast a film over a floor covering. This dirt must be removed if the life of the covering is to be a long one. When a dirt particle is magnified, you see that it has knife-like edges. These particles, under the pressure of feet and the weight of furniture, grind into and cut the rug fibers. In time this is ruinous to the pile of the rug.

Let's see what can be done to preserve the beauty, pattern and color, as well as the fibers of the rug.

The use of underpads to cushion a rug adds to its life. Other rug longevity aids are: control of the humidity of rooms so that they are never excessively dry or damp, as wear is directly related to moisture content of fibers; the changing of the rug's position to distribute wear; the placing of casters under legs of heavy furniture to prevent permanent indentions.

Today let us concentrate on home cleaning of floor coverings. These should be given between professional cleanings by reliable rug cleaners. Assuming that the coverings are vacuumed at least once a week to remove surface litter and keep heavy grit from setling in the rug base, we will proceed from there.

Next let's consider brightening the surface when it becomes soiled. You can dry clean your rugs to brighten the colors and remove the clinging surface oil. But any old cleaner won't do. Be sure to use a reliable one. Some solutions on the market will shrink and cut fibers, cause the lovely colors to "bleed" and lead to shedding and matting of the pile.

Simple Procedure

From personal use I have found that one of the most dependable dry cleaners for home use is an absorbent type one. No slopping around with a liquid, no back-breaking process is involved. The powder is one formulated by a large carpet company. The process to revitalize soiled coverings is as simple as one-two-three.

This absorbent cleaner comes in powder form ready to use without aid of water. It will not harm the fabric since it cannot cause shrinkage, mildew, matting, color change or running of colors. It contains no soap or alkali. This agent does not remove twist from frieze or twist-pile rugs.

A three pound carton is usually enough to maintain a 9 by 12 rug for six months when one application is used per month. The cost is $1. Here are the general directions for using this Aladdin-like rug and carpet cleaner.

First clean covering thoroughly with vacuum cleaner. Sprinkle on a film of the powder. Soiled areas may be cleaned without going over the entire covering. No ring will result. Brush the powder in with any bristle brush. Let the powder stay on the rug for one hour. Last, remove the powder with vacuum cleaner.

If you want to give your rugs that clean-cut look for the holiday season, call National 4200, Extension 324, and learn where this absorbent-type cleaner for making and keeping rugs and carpets clean may be obtained.

Physician Reproves Patients Who Seek Extra Ration Points

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

AN OLD doctor friend of mine is acting as medical adviser to his local food rationing board.

He has just written me of his sense of being imposed on by applicants who come with certificates from their doctors stating that the patient must have more food or more of a different kind of food.

"Doctors," he writes, "react differently. They go from an attitude of complete indifference to a willingness to give any patient anything he asks for, usually on the patient's own judgment."

A request came in for 600 points of processed foods for diverticulitis (a condition of irritation of the lower bowel). One wonders why the patient cannot puree her own vegetables in her own kitchen. Laziness or ignorance?"

Unnecessary Requests

The request of a diabetic for more meat may be understood, but most of the requests are for canned fruits and fruit juices. Why should a diabetic need fruit juice?

There were 47 requests for more meat for diabetes and 4 for hyperinsulinism (which is just the opposite of diabetes). True, extra meat is good for hyperinsulinism, but it is a very rare disease. There are probably not more than 200 cases in the United States, and how could 4 appear in a community of 250,000 population?

Some of the requests are:

For "thyroid condition"—extra pineapple juice, tomato juice, grapefruit juice, apple juice, grape juice. (This is just nonsense. None of these things are good for any "thyroid condition").

For "chronic arthritis"—1 gallon of pineapple juice a week—again nonesense).

For colitis—per week 1 can peaches, 1 can pears, 2 cans fruit cocktail, 4 cans condensed soup—(the peaches and the pears are positively bad for colitis).

Unpatriotic Practice

"But it is allergy that caps the climax," writes my friend. "If one were to take seriously the claims of the patients as to what they couldn't eat, one would despair of the survival of the human race.

"Here again it would seem that only a diet of canned fruit juices would keep them alive. And the doctors sign the certificates!"

My own household has lived on rationing since it began and I can say that any person with any kind of food allergy can get what he or she needs on the ordinary ration points.

The situation reminds me of the old days of prohibition when a doctor would sign a prescription for whisky for anybody at $3 a head. How many invalids really need whisky? Plenty of people like it, but nobody needs it.

It is all unfair and unpatriotic. I can not think of any disease condition that requires food that can not be procured in any part of the United States on ordinary rationing.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

"Do you enjoy your children?" It is an embarrassing question, but it needs to be asked.

Many a mother, who accepts the warm bundle put in her arms at the hospital, feels an overwhelming sense of her great responsibilities. From that moment the baby is a duty rather than a pleasure. So many formulas to be made. So many baths to be given. So many diapers to be washed. The chores, like the trees, obscure the forest that is the child.

Some mothers are actually afraid of their children. If the baby cries they are fearful that to pick it up and soothe it will make the baby spoiled.

They are never comfortable when alone with the child because they are then compelled to use their own judgment and they are fearful of the consequences of it.

This type of mother cannot play well with her children though she may be a conscientious and competent nursemaid to them. They are always clear and well-fed. They have their naps on time and their daily airings. But when the children want to play the mother is unable to be child-like with them.

When the child arrives at the urchin age and is often crusted with dirt, she can't enjoy him. She is ever-ready to haul him to the bathtub and turn him into her kissable, picture-baby again.

Second and third children have more fun with their parents than first children, who are the victims of too much regimentation, too much parental fear and undeveloped judgment. By the time the second child comes most mothers have discovered that minor deviations in routine do not ruin the baby and that one must enjoy children not at stated hours, but when the child is ready for play.

This attitude of good nature, this capacity for flexibility, will subtract enormously from the work of baby care and develop a precious cameraderie between mother and child that is beyond price.

Historic Day Recalled But Not Brooded Over

Col. Halsey Reminiscent—Was Watching Football Game That Sunday

By Martha Rhyne

Folks with their own in the service remembered Pearl Harbor yesterday—but they didn't brood. Their thoughts were grimmer and sadder and perhaps a little wiser—but they continued laughing and griping and questioning and dreaming—covering their anxiety at the ring of the telephone bell, a knock at the door.

Sunday, December 7, 1941, was a beautiful day. The weather held no foreboding. Many famed personages, including the Senate's personable secretary, "Col. Ed" Halsey, were out watching the Redskins lick the Philadelphia Eagles in a thrilling game. But trouble brewed. Jesse Jones, Secretary of Commerce, hastily left a 50-yard line seat, after a note was handed him. Admirals and generals, officers of lesser rank, diplomats, executives, were called in. The announcement of war wasn't made until the crowds had left the stands—then the loudspeaker boomed that the Japs had kicked off and the game was on.

His Son Now In South Pacific

It's not a happy story for "Col. Ed," no happier than for any of the rest of us. His son, Edwin, jr., now a lieutenant, junior grade, in the Navy, volunteered and is now in the South Pacific on a destroyer. "He's cheerful and seems happy," said the colonel. "But he says the weather's hot!" He laughed, God bless him; Americans are like that.

The pages of the newspaper files are already yellowing, but they hold memories. On that memorable Sunday, before Pearl Harbor, the United States had reluctantly dropped hands with a gallant little nation and ordered Finnish ships under protective American custody. The President appealed to Japan's Emperor to call a halt to warlike moves in the Pacific. But occupying equal space were stories of a great battle won—the penny milk battle. The lead editorial was devoted to that subject. The Neediest Family Fund was crusading with vigor.

King Leopold III of Belgium married a commoner. The Russians stopped the Germans at Moscow while Washington was all a-dither over Maxim Litvinoff's arrival with his English-born wife, Ivy. Senator Mead, later to circle a war-gripped globe by air, was pleading for a defense chief in the Cabinet.

Was Day of Social Activity

On the social front, the Philadelphia Orchestra drew as many big names as did the war-declaration Congress passed just a few days later. The largest social register in history had hit the stands. The Henry Wallaces were planning to entertain the Swiss Minister and Mme. Bruggeman and the Paul V. McNutts had invitations out for a gala dinner. The town ran rampant with dispossessed diplomats. The Winter Travel and Resort feature sections were done up in color with such alluring names as Miami, St. Augustine and Monterey—ah, peace!

Those were the days when a whisky add came straight, soliciting rather than apologizing. In the immortal words of one distiller, "Give for Christmas what you would like most to get."

Miss Novick to Wed Capt. Weiss on Sunday

The Rev. and Mrs. Louis Novick announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Shulamith to Capt. Herman H. Weiss, U. S. Dental Corps, who is now stationed at Camp Pickett, Va.

Miss Novick attended the University of Maryland and has been active in civic groups here. Her father has been connected with the Adas Israel Congregation as cantor for the last 20 years.

Captain Weiss is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania Dental School. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Weiss of Paulsboro, N. J., where he practiced before entering the service.

The couple will be married on Sunday at the Adas Israel Synagogue. The Rev. and Mrs. Novick will receive guests at a reception immediately following the 12 o'clock ceremony.

Deward Walker And Bride on Southern Trip

Upon their return from a Southern wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Deward Edgar Walker will make their home in Front Royal, Va.

The bride is the former Miss Elizabeth Deatheridge Eastham, daughter of Mrs. Philip Byrd Eastham and the late Mr. Eastham of Front Royal, and Mr. Walker is the son of Julius Alexander Walker and the late Mrs. Walker of Black Mountain, N. C.

Their marriage took place here on Saturday at the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church with the Rev. Purcell Storey officiating. The bride was given in marriage by Senator Hill Montague of Richmond. She wore a gown of ivory slipper satin and a fingertip length veil held with a halo of seed pearls. Her flowers were white gladioli and roses. Miss Elizabeth LaMar Gettlier of Baltimore, the maid of honor, was attired in plum crepe and carried yellow chrysanthemums. The matron of honor, Mrs. William Jordan Coleman, was costumed in moss-green velvet and carried a bouquet of picardy gladioli. Arthur Garfield Leake served as best man and ushering was W. Ted Dent.

About Washington . . .

CIRCULATING through local taprooms is the report that Goebbels is making grade-A Nazi propaganda out of one of America's most popular current tunes. In other words, he's circulating the story that a hit song in America indicates that our people want our soldiers to capitulate—at once. The song? Why, "Pistol Packin' Mamma!" of course. As Goebbels has it—it's an urgent plea to our soldiers . . . to lay their weapons down!

"HE'S A SWEET boy . . . but it's not a romance. It never will be." That's exactly what the lovely and lively K. T. Stevens told me a year ago when asked her about her widely rumored romance with Alfred Gwynn Vanderbilt. She was appearing in a play here at the time, and the multimillionaire turfman was in the audience every night.

"She's a lovely girl . . . but it's not a romance. At least, not now," declared Al Vanderbilt when I asked him the same question one day at the Laurel race track.

And now from Hollywood comes word that the two plan to wed as soon as the Navy gives Lieut. (jg) Vanderbilt leave from his current duties at piloting a PT-boat somewhere in the Pacific.

Even a year ago a blind man could have seen that it definitely was a romance. And anybody in Washington who watched it in the blossoming stages wasn't surprised when it reached the headlines as an engagement announcement. Incidentally, just before Al took off from here, he dropped a hint or two that wedding bells would ring for him and K. T. (pronounced "Katey") some time before Christmas . . . if he could get back by then.

ALTHOUGH SHE'S less than six months old, little Valerie Bolton will sit up and take notice in a big, grown-up way when the parties swirling around her christening ceremony add a gala accent to the Capital whirl this weekend. The daughter of Lieut. and Mrs. Luther Matthew Bolton will take over the spotlight at St. Margaret's Church at 5 p. m., on Saturday in the presence of a few close friends of the family.

That's the same church, incidentally, in which her parents were married back in 1935. The wedding that united young "Bill" Bolton and the former Carie Tracy Lucas took place at 4 p. m., and was followed by a reception at the Washington Club. There was a large wedding party, several members of which are now in Uncle Sam's service, as is the naval lieutenant father.

Valerie, who was born May 23, this year, at Columbia Hospital, will make her christening bow with the help of a godfather, B. D. McIntyre of Monroe, Mich., and a trio of godmothers—all aunts. They are Mrs. Donald L. Whitehouse and Miss Helen Bolton, sisters of Lieutenant Bolton; and Mrs. Joseph Kershaw of Charleston, S. C., sister of Mrs. Bolton.

Immediately after the christening—at 5:30 p. m., to be exact—Lieutenant and Mrs. Bolton will receive a number of friends in the Carlton Room of the Carlton Hotel. Later, they will entertain at dinner at the Shoreham Hotel, having in their company 10 friends from Michigan and New York—Mr. and Mrs. B. D. McIntyre, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. McIntyre, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. McIntyre, Mr. and Mrs. Larry Franchot and Mr. and Mrs. George Streicher.

On Sunday the round will continue when Lieutenant and Mrs. Bolton entertain at a mid-day party at Merlands, their Maryland home; and after that—at 3:30 p. m.—there will be a going-away fete for the house guests. What a weekend!

"YOUR FACE IS familiar," said the taxi driver as a distinguished passenger settled himself for a ride from Hotel 2400 to the Mayflower the other day. "I know I've seen you before. You are——"

"I am George Washington," came the reply in unmistakable English accents.

The driver caught a glimpse of the man in the mirror; gulped; wondered if he should pinch himself to see if he was dreaming.

"I am George Washington . . . on the stage," the man went on, with a smile. He turned out to be Cecil Humphreys, British-born actor who plays that role in "The Patriots," Sydney Kingsley's drama now in its second week at the National Theater.

"Seems funny," the driver said. "that an Englishman should be playing the part of America's first President."

"Ah, that's where you are all wrong. You forget that George Washington was an Englishman; that he was born over here in an English colony; that he grew up in England; and that he was a full-fledged Englishman in every way . . . until he got fed up with with George IV and led an army against him. And—right he was to do it, too."

"I felt just like I'd had a lesson in history—straight from the father of our country," said the taxi driver later. "That stage George Washington is some man!"

Mrs. Hopkins, Actress' Mother In Washington for the Winter

Would Like to Organize Group Here To Work for Theater Wing War Service

By Marie McNair

"I'm not like a lot of Hollywood mothers," says Mrs. Ellen Hopkins, mother of Miriam of stage and screen fame.

And, indeed, nothing could be closer to the truth.

Here from New York, which she now calls home, Mrs. Hopkins is spending the winter with a cousin, Mrs. Lucille M. Ellis, and bringing cheer into a household which has known nothing but sickness for many months.

A letter from her famous daughter in yesterday's mail, comes from Hollywood, where Miss Hopkins writes her mother she is in her Beverly Hills home—one of the sightseeing buses' "musts" on their itinerary—and preparing for a new picture.

All Hopkins fans—and there are millions of them—know that she has been starring in a long run of "The Skin Of Our Teeth" on Broadway, a play which had its premiere in Washington and went over big.

Mrs. Hopkins won't trade on the name of her famous daughter. In fact, she leans over backward to prevent that fact from becoming known. One who believes in relying on accomplishments of her own, Mrs. Hopkins is a charming person in her own right, with a soft-spoken Southern voice tinged with a Virginia accent. Just now she's wrapped up in war work, but for years she had been an active member of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, is chairman of the educational committee of the New York chapter and of its entertainment program. She's also registrar of the Society of Virginia Women and historian of the Dixie Club.

Makes Slippers For Servicemen

In New York, Mrs. Hopkins is a member of the Theater Wing War Service group, takes over desk duties when called upon, knits and sews for the servicemen. Her greatest pleasure in doing for the boys in the service is turning out a very special kind of felt bedroom slipper, the material for which is supplied exclusively to the Theater Wing. The slippers are gray bound in braid, and are put together by the Theater Wing workers. It's something of a job, as each piece must be measured with accuracy. Mrs. Hopkins can practically finish a pair in three hours, for she has become an expert, but any work that is not completed at an afternoon session is taken home by the workers and brought back at the next meeting with the last stitch in line.

It's Mrs. Hopkins' purpose to establish a unit in Washington while she's here. Already she has about a dozen volunteers, some from St. Margaret's Church, where Mrs. Willoughby Chesley introduced the visitor and explained her work to several of its members; more from the Robert E. Lee Chapter of the UDC; and before she leaves in April to return to New York, Mrs. Hopkins hopes she will have a well-established Washington branch contributing regularly to the Theater Wing War Service.

Both Have 'The Cutter Foot'

But now—something about the Hopkins family itself. Stemming from a long line of Virginia ancestry, Mrs. Hopkins also numbers among her forbears Arthur Middleton of Charleston, S. C., a signer of the Declaration of Independence. A portrait of Henry Middleton, son of the famous patriot, hangs in Mrs. Hopkins' drawing room in her New York home.

The Cutter family of New England also figure in the Hopkins genealogy and a favorite saying in the family is "she has the Cutter foot," meaning the slim, high-instepped and hard-to-fit type. Both Mrs. Hopkins and her level daughter have inherited that characteristic. In fact, both mother and daughter are so much alike that it would be difficult to tell them apart. Both are blond and blue-eyed; they wear the same size glove, shoe and frock and Mrs. Hopkins admits when she needs a new dinner gown she often slips over to her daughter's apartment on Sutton place, just a block away from her own home, and sneaks a dress from her closet. Both are musical, too. Mrs. Hopkins started at the age of 8 to study the piano, later took vocal lessons. She launched Miriam on a musical career, too, teaching her herself. "But, then, when she started to teach me, I told her it was time to turn her over to someone else. And I did."

Many Parties Given for Mrs. Close

"This week I must get on with the packing."

Mrs. Ralph Close, wife of the retiring South African Minister, whose departure from Washington is in the immediate offing, admits that she has found little time for the all-important task of "packing up."

The reason, no doubt, is that the popular Mrs. Close is currently the principal figure in an extensive series of farewell fetes. Hardly a day has passed in the last fortnight that was without a luncheon, tea or dinner in her honor. And the round apparently is to continue right up to the day the couple leave for home . . . with time out for packing, of course.

Highlighting her schedule yesterday was the luncheon at which Lady Bajpai, wife of the Indian Regent General, was hostess. The luncheon, a small one, took place at the Bajpai residence on Macomb st. and was attended by a few intimate friends of the honor guest. Present were Lady Dixon, Mme. de Kauffmann, Lady Sabson, Mme. Kwapiszewska, Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Mrs. James L. Dorling, Mrs. James M. Souby and Mrs. Martin Vogel.

The Minister and Mrs. Close will be honored at a dinner next Tuesday evening, given by the Australian Minister and Lady Dixon. On Saturday will be a luncheon at the Sulgrave Club for Mrs. Close, given by Mrs. Ralph Brewster and Mrs. Joshua Evans and a group of friends.

There are no further parties planned at the South African Legation before the Closes make their final bow. The dinner there Monday night honoring Col. Deneys Reitz was the last on the schedule.

* * * *

Miss Marian Claussen will entertain at a late afternoon party today in honor of Miss Ann Mitchell, who has just returned to Washington after spending a week in New York. The fete will take place from 5 to 7 o'clock at the Wardman Park Hotel, where Miss Claussen lives.

Purely Personal News And Notes

The Polish Ambassador and Mme. Ciechanowska were hosts last evening to Mme. Landowska, noted harpsichordist. She made her first appearance in Washington for many years last night when she was one of the soloists with the Chamber Music Guild in its final concert of the year. The Naval and Air Attache of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Brunet entertained at dinner last evening before the concert for Mme. Landowska and will entertain again this afternoon in her honor.

Dr. Vicente Valdes Rodriguez, who has been in Havana for several weeks, returned yesterday to rejoin Senora de Rodriguez. He brought with him official notification papers announcing his promotion from Counselor of the embassy to Minister-Counselor.

Mrs. Nicholas R. Jones of New York is at the Mayflower, having come to town for the Chamber Music Guild concert last evening given by Mme. Wanda Landowska, harpsichordist. Mrs. Jones entertained at dinner before the concert for Lieut. Walter R. Amesbury, jr., and Mrs. Amesbury of New York, who are living in Washington.

Arriving from Stephens College in Columbia, Mo., next week will be Miss Ann Gilbert Underwood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert S. Underwood, who will spend the Christmas holidays with her parents. She will have as her guest her roommate, Miss Nancy Morgan of Huntington, W. Va. Miss Underwood was recently elected a representative of her residence hall to the Student Congress at Stephens.

Miss Clara Sasscer Engaged to Wed H. C. Chandler, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Harold Sasscer have announced the engagement of their daughter, Clara Ambler, to Harrison Critchlow Chandler, jr., son of Mrs. Elizabeth Bell Chandler of Hollidaysburg, Pa., and Harrison C. Chandler of Detroit, Mich.

Miss Sasscer is a graduate of the Potomac and Madeira Schools and attended Sweet Briar College in Virginia. Mr. Chandler studied at Antioch College and is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh School of Engineering. He is now with the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics. No date has been set for the wedding.

Helen Taylor Is Bride of Albert Bishop

Now on their honeymoon trip to New York City are Mr. and Mrs. Albert Marshall Bishop whose wedding took place in Washington on December 4.

The former Miss Helen Ruth Taylor, daughter of Mrs. Flora T. Taylor and the late Walter S. Taylor of Alma, Ga., and Mr. Bishop, son of Mrs. Clara S. Bishop and the late Rev. Thomas M. Bishop, Washington, were married at the Petworth Methodist Church at a 6 o'clock evening ceremony. The Rev. Frank Steelman officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by Arthur Clarendon Smith. She was gowned in white satin with lace inserts fashioned with a sweetheart neckline, a tight-fitting bodice of lace and satin and a full skirt. She carried white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Hazel Taylor, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor and the bridesmaid was Mrs. Bonnie T. Baker.

Miss Taylor was gowned in pink chiffon and Mrs. Baker in blue lace net. Both carried pink roses.

Wesley W. Bishop of Syracuse, N. Y., brother of the bridegroom, was best man and the ushers were Robert J. Woods, Roy L. Long and William B. Neff.

Following the ceremony there was a reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Smith. The couple will make their home in Washington.

The bridegroom was graduated from the College of Business Administration.

British-Made Containers Named 'Ameri-cans'

British women are making Ameri-cans—and that's not double talk. Ameri-cans is the name given to those portable gasoline containers which the Germans first used in supplying their motorized desert army in North Africa. They can be thrown from a speeding truck without damage; the gas can be poured from the cans into motor vehicle tanks without spilling and because of their bricklike shape they can be easily stacked.

Under reverse lend-lease, British women are making these Ameri-cans for the United States forces in the European war theater. The materials come from America; the work is done in Britain.

Pickup Snack Slows You Down When It Makes You Overweight

By Ida Jean Kain

You war workers have to eat to keep up your strength but you don't have to overeat—and that's what a good many of you are doing. One girl I know has put on 25 pounds she does not need and certainly does not want. She is half in earnest about quitting her job to reduce.

But it isn't the job. It is the result of eating on the job. The girls have cake and coffee in the middle of the morning. They take turns bringing a delicious, home-baked cake. Now, a blue ribbon cake may sometimes have 400 calories per respectable slice. And, of course, they all have another fattening snack of some kind in the afternoon.

A snack between meals is an energy pick-up. But these calories should be subtracted from the day's total requirement, not added to it. If your war job demands a great deal of physical activity, you may need these additional calories. But the average war job does not entail much activity.

If you are gaining weight, you are eating more food than you need. Excess weight does not mean extra strength. It actually slows you down, aside from spoiling your figure.

You need good food, the kind that supplies the materials needed for endurance and exuberance. Certainly, you need a good breakfast—fruit, an egg or cereal, toast and coffee. That breakfast contains fewer calories than the slice of cake and it provides one-third of your day's nutritive essentials.

Go ahead with the mid-morning snack, but make it one of these: fruit, fruit juice, milk, or coffee.

You need a good lunch to carry you through the afternoon. If you pack your own, have a meat, egg or cheese sandwich; carrot slivers and celery or a tomato; fresh fruit, and milk, cocoa, or a milk soup. If your weight does not prohibt, you many have a sweet.

For dinner, complete your day's nutritive requirements. If possible, have a hot green leafy or a yellow vegetable plus potatoes, a serving of meat, fish, or fowl, and a salad. And if you didn't take it in the middle of the afternoon, have your second or even third glass of milk.

CAR Presents Jeep Money To U. S. Army

The National Society Children of the American Revolution has raised money to give the United States Army a jeep. The presentation ceremoney will take place tomorrow at 12:30 p. m., Memorial Continental Hall.

Mrs. Louise Moseley Heaton of Clarksdale, Miss., National president of the CAR, will purchase a bond from Mrs. Madeline Roussin of the Treasury Department with money which has been raised by the Children of the American Revolution throughout the United States.

Margaret Ann Creyke, 5 years old, will present the bond to a representative of the War Department. Margaret Ann Creyke, granddaughter of Mrs. Geoffrey Creyke of Washington, D. C., DAR regent for the District of Columbia, is a member of the Harriet M. Lothrop CAR Society.

Among those attending this ceremony will be Mrs. William H. Pouch of New York, president general, DAR, and honorary National president CAR, members of the National Board of the CAR, and Miss Virginia Frances Simmons of Washington, D. C. Junior president of the CAR for the District.

The money for the jeep was raised throughout the country by members of every Society CAR. This is their third contribution to the war effort. The other gifts were an ambulance and club-mobile presented to the American Red Cross.

Justice Arnold Scores Court For Dismissing Damage Suit

Justice Thurman Arnold, former trust-buster and now on the United States Court of Appeals bench, used some of the strongest language a member of that court has ever written in a court opinion, when he described yesterday the action of a District Court justice in dismissing a $35,000 damage suit.

The case involved the Virginia "guest statute" which says a host cannot be held liable for damages unless he was guilty of gross negligence. The suit resulted from a traffic accident.

In a concurring opinion, Justice Arnold said:

"I concur but I do not think that the majority opinion sufficiently brings out the capricious and arbitrary character of the ruling of the court below directing a verdict for the defendant. Defendant was driving 40 miles an hour at night and in the rain. He put on additional speed in crossing another highway in disregard of a stop sign. In the absence of some contradictory testimony or some excuse, such conduct constitutes gross negligence. I cannot agree with the majority opinion insofar as it intimates that any other conclusion is possible on the evidence before us."

Plaintiffs in the case were Anne Marine Childs, Mary Campbell and Vincent Guarnera. The defendant and driver of the car was Thomas J. Radzevich. The trial magistrate was Justice T. Alan Goldsborough.

The appeals court directed District Court to rehear the case on the ground that the question of gross negligence was for a jury to decide in this case, and not for a judge.

Gifts of $675 Start Red Cross Christmas Fund

Two early Christmas gifts from anonymous donors yesterday gave the Red Cross a $675 start toward its holiday work.

An "elderly lady" was the only designation for the giver of $300 to the camp and hospital corps, for musical instruments in hospital recreation rooms. A $375 gift came from an Army officer who decided this was a good way to spend the money usually lavished on friends.

More than 1000 members of the Red Cross Canteen Corps are expected to attend the Corps rally tonight at 8 o'clock in the United States Chamber of Commerce, 1615 H st. nw.

Mrs. Sherman Trowbridge, chairman, will preside and speakers will include Maj. Gen. Alec H. Gatehouse, veteran of the North African campaign, in Washington with the British Army Staff and British Ministry of Supply, and Mrs. George A. Garrett, chairman of the D. C. Chapter's Volunteer Special Services division.

White to Seek Seat as Senator From Kentucky

Robert Harvey White, 55, a former resident of Louisville, Ky., for 22 years who held many public offices before starting business here 10 years ago, announced last night that he plans to become a candidate as an independent next fall for United States Senator from Kentucky.

White, who heads a public relations firm here, was a captain in the Engineer Corps during the last war and served in France with the American Expeditionary Forces. Returning to Louisville after the war, he served as chairman of the city's board of public works and in 1924 he became city auditor. He was vice chairman of the State athletic board of control under two Governors.

From 1921 to 1926, he was a director of the Louisville Board of Trade and a director of the State Fair for the same period. Later he was chairman of the good roads committee of the Board of Trade.

Postlude

Harpsicord Delight at Guild Event

By Ray C. B. Brown

Chamber Music Guild presents its String Quartet (Mishel Piastro, Harold Kohon, Felix Frost and Marcel Ancher) on Tuesday night in D. A. R. Memorial Continental Hall. Guest artists: Wanda Landowska, harpsichord; Nan Merriman, mezzo-soprano. Program: Quartet on Indian Themes (Frederick Jacobi), Il Tramonto (Ottorino Respighi), Concerto in D major (Vivaldi-Bach), Concerto in C minor (Carl Philip Emanuel Bach).

Wanda Landowska, who, if an aristocracy exists in the democratic realm of music, is Queen of the Harpsichord, was the cynosure of attention last evening at the Chamber Music Guild concert in Memorial Continental Hall. Hers is a modest regality, relying upon no pomp or magnificence, but upon the quiet possession of musicianship of the purest pedigree. Her domain is that of a small state and her rule over it is absolute—not in the tyrannical sense, but as a wise and beneficent monarch. Because her authority is so unquestionable, she is able to recreate for us the atmosphere of a period by playing its music with an utterly convincing authenticity.

To our modern ears dulled by Wagnerian tempests, Straussian hurricanes and the brazen cacophonies of swing, the harpsichord at first comes as a faint rustling music from a great distance. It is only when one adjusts the hearing to an entirely different scale of values, that one perceives the exquisite shades of tone, the refinements of dynamics, the perfections of phrases and the graces of rhythm in Landowska's playing.

Scholarly, imperious, sensitive and poetic, her musicianship made the auditors feel that they were in imagination hearing Vivaldi's D major concerto as Bach would have played it on the harpsichord. They recalled her with a tumultuous delight and her response was to perform the "Rondo alla Turca" from Mozart's A major sonata in a manner that made it a revelation of hidden beauties. With the Guild Quartet she played a concerto in C minor by Carl Philip Emanuel Bach, and again one was transported to a strange place where the entrance of the strings sounded like woodwinds against the ethereal delicacy of the harpsichord tone.

While Wanda Landowska naturally dominated the concert, the Guild provided a very pleasant surprise by introducing Nan Merriman, young American mezzo-soprano, who was heard in Respighi's poignant "Il Tramonto" for voice and string quartet. Here is a singer of unusual promise, endowed with a lovely voice which she uses without artifice. She sang the vocal line as it should be sung—as another instrument in the ensemble and not as a projection of personality. There are some points in her gamut where the tone needs strengthening, but those are minor and remediable matters in a voice so appealing in freshness and warmth.

One noticed that the Guild omitted from the printed program a previous statement that "Il Tramonto" was being given its first local performance. That precaution was correct, for the work was presented three or four years ago by the Washington Chamber Music Society with Helen Henderson as the singer. The concert opened with Frederick Jacobi's Quartet on Indian Themes which was given a curiously uneven and unsympathetic reading.

Defense Aides Mark Pearl Harbor Day at Rally

Civilian defense workers must not let vigilance lag simply because they have not been called upon yet to perform the duties for which they were organized, Representative Cunningham (Republican) of Iowa told 200 gathered at a Remember-Pearl-Harbor rally at St. Vincent's School last night.

The rally was promoted by the Civilian Defense Committee of the Metropolis area, of which the chairman, Mrs. Franklin G. Sartwell, presided.

Other speakers were Rowland K. Speer, former deputy air raid warden of the area, now in charge of warden training for the District and Logan Ratliffe, present deputy warden of the area.

NOW SHE SHOPS "CASH AND CARRY"
Without Painful Backache
Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.
When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Ritchie Rites To Be Held Here Today

Funeral services for the Rev. Edward Lee Ritchie, 66, retired Lutheran minister, who died Sunday at his home, 1649 Hobart st. nw., will be held at p. m. today in the Church of the Reformation.

At the time of his retirement in 1938, the Rev. Mr. Ritchie was pastor of the St. John's Evangelical Lutheran Church in Mercersburg, Pa., where he was president of the Western Conference of Ministers and a member of the West Pennsylvania Synod. During the last year and a half, he had been doing clerical work at the Walter Reed Medical Center. An active worker for the Church of the Reformation, he was president of its Men's Club.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Pearl Ryan Ritchie, and three daughters, Lucile Elizabeth, Josephine Love, and Margaret Ritchie, all of Washington.

The Rev. Oscar Blackwelder, pastor of the Church of the Reformation, assisted by the Rev. J. B. Baker, pastor of St. Mathew's Lutheran Church, York, Pa., will conduct the services and burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Arthur J. Dodge

Funeral services for Arthur J. Dodge, former president of the National Press Club and member of the Gridiron Club, will be held at 11 a. m. today at the Hysong funeral home. Dr. Frederick B. Harris, chaplain of the Senate, wil preside and private burial will follow in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Dodge, who died Sunday at his home in the Portner Apartments, was one of the oldest members of the Gridiron Club in point of service, having been elected in 1906, when he was a correspondent with the Milwaukee Sentinel.

The following members of the club were appointed yesterday by the president, Lewis Wood, to attend the funeral:

Phelps H. Adams, Clifford K. Berryman, George Rothwell Brown, Harry J. Brown, H. E. C. Bryant, Charles O. Gridley, Jay C. Hayden, Arthur Krock, G. Gould Lincoln, Edgar Markham, John Callan O'Laughlin, Robert Lincoln O'Brien, Arthur B. Pierce, James D. Preston, Byron Price, Charles G. Ross, Mark Thistlethwaite, Ernest G. Walker, Lyle C. Wilson, Henry Xander, J. Harry Cunningham and George Myers.

John B. Murphy

John B. Murphy, 76, retired locomotive engineer with the Pennsylvania Railroad, died yesterday at Sibley Hospital after an illness of two years.

A native of the District, he made his home at 1242 6th st. sw. When he retired 11 years ago, he had been an employe of the Pennsylvania line for 51 years, and he was a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers for more than 48 years.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Annie Niebel Murphy, and a sister, Mrs. Mary Young, of Washington.

Requiem mass will be said at 9 a. m. Friday at St. Dominic's Church and burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

David B. Raum, 54-year-old chain grocery operator, well known in Northeast and Southeast Washington, died at his home, 1201 E st. ne., yesterday, following a long illness.

He was a veteran of the last war and a Mason.

Surviving are his wife, Ruth B. Raum; a son, Army Lieut. Mark Raum, stationed in Florida; a brother, Aaron Raum; two sisters, Mrs. Benjamin Newhouse and Mrs. Michael Kapneck, all of Washington.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Wednesday at Danzansky's Funeral Home, 3501 14th st. nw.

District Woman Christens Ship Named for Father

Mrs. Merwin Browne, of 4711 Albemarle st. nw., yesterday christened a Liberty ship named for her father, Hugh Kerwin, former labor executive for the Bethlehem-Fairfield shipyard and the first director of conciliation of the Labor Department.

The ship, to be turned over to the British under lend-lease, is of the 10,800-ton Liberty ship type.

Kerwin, for whom the ship was named, directed conciliation efforts of the Labor Department for 25 years and was once assistant to the Secretary of Labor. He died June 10, 1937.

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — By Dale Allen

GYPSY, I'M QUITE ANGRY WITH YOU! YOUR ATTACK ON MISS CHATTERBY AND MRS. GUSHMOOR WAS UNLADYLIKE AND UNWISE!
IT'S TRUE, A GOSSIP IS SATAN'S OWN SISTER, AND THEY DESERVED A REBUKE --BUT NOT--WELL---
---NOT THE WAY I POURED IT ON, HUH? I GUESS SOME OF THE WORDS I USED WERE A LITTLE GAMEY! I--I APOLOGIZE, MRS. WORTH!
AND--IF YOU SAY SO-- I'LL EVEN APOLOGIZE TO THEM!
I'M AFRAID, IF I KNOW SMALL TOWNS, IT'S--TOO LATE FOR THAT, MY CHILD!

MICKEY FINN — Emergency! — By Lank Leonard

I CAN TALK, ANNIE — FANNY HAS GONE TO A BRIDGE PARTY! I JUST CALLED TO LET YOU KNOW THAT I HAVE A NEW PLAN TO TAKE CARE OF PHIL!
I HOPE YOU HAVEN'T THOUGHT OF IT TOO LATE, OWNEY!
WHAT DO YOU MEAN BY "TOO LATE"?
OWNEY—I'M TERRIBLY WORRIED! HE CARRIES ALL THAT MONEY HE'S WON, AROUND WITH HIM — AND I'M AFRAID HE MIGHT BE ROBBED TONIGHT!
HOW?
WELL, YOU KNOW HOW HE LOVES TO FLASH THAT BIG ROLL OF BILLS ON PEOPLE— AND HE'S GONE TO THE FIGHTS AT THE ARENA!
THE ARENA!

MR. AND MRS. — Mysteries of the Living Room — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover

WELL,? WELL—WHAT?
I MEAN TO SAY YOU DON'T NOTICE ANYTHING? I'M JUST DUMB—WHAT IS IT?
IT'S SO DISCOURAGING. CAN'T YOU SEE I'VE CHANGED THE CANDLESTICKS FROM THE MANTLE TO THE SIDETABLE? OH, YEAH? SO YOU HAVE. THAT ALL?
NO, IT'S NOT ALL. BUT I'M NOT GOING TO SHOW YOU ANYTHING MORE IF YOU CAN'T SEE FOR YOURSELF
GEE, IT IS DISCOURAGING, AIN'T IT—ME BEING SO DUMB

DIXIE DUGAN — Too High! — By J. P. McEvoy and H. J. Striebel

MY MORALE'S IN BAD SHAPE, DIXIE—
FELLAS—LET'S FLIP FOR ODD MAN TO SEE WHO GETS HER ATTENTIONS FIRST??
FAIR 'NOUGH!
HEY! YOU'RE TOSSING IT TOO HIGH!

RIGHT AROUND HOME — By Dudley Fisher

YOU STAY IN BED, HONEY, AND I'LL GET MY OWN BREAKFAST!
DO YOU THINK YOU CAN MANAGE?
JUST ADD HOT WATER AND SERVE, AND SHE ASKS ME IF I CAN MANAGE!
THERE'S NOTHING TO COOKING THESE DAYS!
OH, SUSIE!!!
THERE AIN'T ANY HOT WATER!

JOE PALOOKA — Big Business — By Ham Fisher

KNOBBY LEFT ME IN CHARGE OF THE STORE ONE DAY, BOY— I SURE WAS ANXIOUS T'MAKE A SALE.
HOW'S BIZNESS, KNOBBY?
PRETTY SLOW. I LEFT TH' KID IN CHARGE. HOW ABOUT SAME A PINOCHLE?
I DIDN'T KNOW IT THEN, BUT A GANG OF NO-GOODS HEARD ABOUT IT AN' CAME OVER TO THE STORE.
I SURE WAS IGNORANT—BOY OH BOY!
YEAH—WE WANTA HELP YA. I'LL CHARGE IT. YA OUGHTA GIT A RAISE.
HEY—LEAVE SOME A THAT STOOFF FER ME.
YESSIR—YESSIR—GEE—I NEVER KIN THANK YOU GENTLEMUN—MISTER WALSH'LL CERT'NY BE SURPRISED.

JANE ARDEN — All According to Plan — By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

THE GIRL GOES MIT?
JA!
THE DOT WILL HIDE THE HANDCUFFS—THAT MS HOW I PLANNED IT—
YOU HAFF YOUR ORDERS, KARL—FIRST TEAR UP THIS ROOM—THEN PHONE THE F.B.I.—
JA! THEN I TAKE SWENSON'S PLACE—
WHEN THE F.B.I. ARRIVES, I SAY HERMAN TRIED TO KILL ME BUT I WAS TOO QUICK FOR HIM—AND HE ESCAPED AFTER A STRUGGLE
DAS IST GOOT—
THE F.B.I. IS SURE TO DISCOVER HOW WE SWITCHED GUARDS—THAT STORY WILL DIVERT SUSPICION FROM YOU!

SUPERMAN — Hear Superman 5:45 P.M. Today—WOL — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

I'M GOTTA... PROVE... UNCLE CLARK IS SUPERMAN... I'VE GOTTA... PROVE... IT...
YAH, YAH, YAH— YOU CAN'T PROVE I'M SUPERMAN!
YAH, YAH, YAH— SO I'LL PROVE SUPERMAN IS YOU!
LOOK HERE, UNCLE SUPERMAN, I AM FED UP WITH THIS NONSENSE! AIN'T YOU REALLY UNCLE CLARK?
CLARK? THAT MEEK REPORTER FELLOW?
WHY, SUSIE, I WOULDN'T EVEN BOTHER ANSWERING THAT QUESTION! IT'S POSITIVELY INSULTING!
AW, YOU'RE JUST AN OLD MEANIE, LIKE UNCLE CLARK! I'LL SHOW THE BOTH OF YOU— I MEAN THE ONE OF YOU!
TRANSP

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — By Clifford McBride

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — By Saunders and Weggon

NOW, WHAT'S THE CHIEF'S BIG ANGLE? LYING OUT THERE IN THE DRINK AND TELLIN' ME TO HIDE--?
OH! OH! THERE COMES THE ANSWER--IN BOOTS!
A NAZI BEACH PATROL!--AND THEY'VE FOUND WHAT'S LEFT OF OUR RUBBER RAFT!
THEY'RE GOING BACK TO SPREAD THE ALARM! LOOKS LIKE A COUPLE OF STROLLIN PEDDLERS MIGHT WIND UP IN THE CLINK BEFORE NIGHT!

WINNIE WINKLE — Pillow Slip — By Branner

SO I WAS TOO THIN FOR THAT SANTA CLAUS JOB AT TH' EMPORIUM, EH??
WELL, THESE PILLOWS WILL CHANGE MY APPEARANCE!
I'LL TRY TH' ENTERPRIZE DEPARTMENT STORE! THEY CAN'T SAY I'M TOO SKINNY, NOW!!
NO--WE CAN'T USE YOU! YOU'RE TOO STOUT--- AND IN THE WRONG PLACE!!!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED — By Zane Grey

AND WHILE YOU'RE BOTH OUT COLD, I'LL BE STAGING A REALLY BIG ROBBERY!!
MEANWHILE, WORRIED OVER KING'S LONG ABSENCE
SIRE, THAT GLOWING GHOST MUST HAVE WAYLAID KING! I'M GOING TO FIND OUT...
OOH, H-N-NO, KID! NOT IN TO THOSE WOODS... NEVAIR!
